House stands firm on freeze issue

By PATRICIA KOZA
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The House, working late into the night, Wednesday defeated two attempts to weaken a resolution calling on the United States and the Soviet Union to freeze nuclear weapons production, then reduce their arsenals.

On a narrow 215-209 vote, the House defeated an amendment by Rep. Mark Siljander, R-Mich., that would have offered President Reagan greater latitude in carrying out the goals of the resolution.

That amendment was opposed by freeze advocates because it would have weakened the objective of an immediate freeze on producing nuclear weapons.

The narrowness of the vote appeared to surprise some freeze proponents, who earlier predicted the resolution would win by at least 50 votes.

However, their side appeared to regain momentum on a subsequent set of votes on an amendment that would have gutted the resolution by providing that nothing in it should be construed to prevent the United States from continuing to modernize its nuclear arsenal.

A final vote was anticipated by late evening.

Earlier, Republican leader Robert Michel warned that approval of the resolution would be part of a "political master plan" to rob the United States of its bomber and missile forces.

"This freeze resolution is only the first sip of a bitter cup that will be offered to you," the Illinois congressman said as the House acted on several amendments to the resolution.

The House approved one amendment calling for on-site inspections "as appropriate" to verify compliance with the freeze, but rejected another that said nothing in the resolution should be understood to support unilateral disarmament by the United States.

Michel predicted freeze supporters soon will be asking Congress to cut funding for the B-1 bomber, the MX, Pershing and cruise missiles and the nuclear-powered Trident submarine.

"When will you say no to them?" he asked. "On the B-1? On the MX? On the Trident? The Pershing? The cruise missile? Somewhere along the line, if you love peace and freedom, you're going to have to say no."

While opponents argued the resolution would lock America into a position of military inferiority with the Soviet Union, its chief sponsor said supporters of the freeze are concerned citizens who abhor the arms race.

"Let it be fully understood that supporters of (the resolution) are not puppets of the Soviet Union," said Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

The resolution calls for "a mutual and verifiable freeze on and reductions in nuclear weapons."

Proponents consider the resolution nonbinding, saying "it only expresses the will of Congress."

President Reagan, who has suggested the Kremlin is exploiting the freeze movement, met Tuesday at the White House with about two dozen fence-sitters and anti-freeze members of Congress. But he appeared resigned to defeat in the House and will concentrate efforts to have the Senate kill the resolution.

Zablocki said the freeze resolution aims at setting objectives for strategic arms limitation talks — START — that are "almost identical" to those of the administration.

"It does not attempt to negotiate START on a day-to-day basis, but it does establish a general policy and broad parameters," he said.

Five Marines injured in Beirut

By SCOTT MacLEOD
United Press International

Unknown attackers lobbed a hand grenade Wednesday on a U.S. Marine patrol along Beirut's coast road, slightly wounding five leathernecks. Two Israeli soldiers were killed in a vehicle that hit a landmine on the Beirut-Damascus highway.

The assault on the 12-man Marine patrol came only 12 hours after seven Italian members of Lebanon's 4,800-man multinational peacekeeping force were wounded in an ambush near Beirut International airport.

It was the first time the Marines were attacked since their arrival last September. One Marine, however, was killed and another wounded Sept. 30 during minefield-clearing operations near Beirut International airport.

"The patrol took a grenade from a second-floor window along the coast road," said Col. James Mead, commander of the 1,200-strong U.S. Marine contingent in Lebanon.

Maj. Bill Grein, a U.S. Marine spokesman, said the five Marines were treated for superficial "leg and arm shrapnel wounds" and were reported "doing very well" in the hospital aboard the USS Guadalcanal off the Lebanese coast. None of the wounded was identified.

Grien said the five "should be returned (to duty) tomorrow."

In a phone call to a news agency, a previously unknown group calling itself the "Islamic Struggle Organization," claimed responsibility for the attack on what it called "American occupation forces." Officials, however, could not verify the authenticity of the call.

The PLO, through its office in Rome, denied responsibility for the attack, saying it was carried out by "those who desire the negotiations for the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Lebanon to fail."

Cpl. George Fischer, 21, of Louisville, Ky., "point man" for the routine patrol in a Shiite Moslem area north of Beirut's airport, said the men were saved from serious injury by their flak jackets.

"As we were passing a bombed-out building that was abandoned I heard a clicking sound," Fischer said. So I stopped and looked backward and saw a grenade being lobbed in the air.

"It hit the ground and about two seconds later it blew up," he said. "I just kind of froze, and it blew up."

The grenade landed between the patrol leader, who was among the injured, and Cpl. Brian Taylor, 21, of Binghamton, N.Y.

"I saw a piece of shraonel hit my flack jacket. But I hit the deck and rolled into cover," Taylor said.

Reporters visiting the scene after the attack reported the Marines on combat alert. The American soldiers were joined by Lebanese police and troops who cordoned off the area in search of the attackers.

Fischer said the American troops would be "a little more uneasy" now on their patrols.

He noted the Marines were patroling without live ammunition in their M-16s. He said they loaded them right after the attack, but "the guy, whoever threw the grenade, had already taken off."

In Washington, an envoy of Lebanese President Amin Gemayel told President Reagan "the entire nation of Lebanon" regrets the assault, which occurred about 9 a.m., 12 hours after unknown attackers ambushed a two-jeep Italian patrol in the same vicinity and then fired on pursuing Italian marines.

50-50 tax bill is weakened

By MARK SHENEFELT
United Press International

BOISE — The Idaho House endorsed by a nearly two-thirds margin Wednesday a bill narrowing the impact of the "50-50" residential property-tax exemption.

After weighing the politically hazardous issue during more than one hour of debate, the House voted 46-23 for the measure and sent it to the Senate.

If the upper chamber passes the bill, the measure may face rough water in the governor's office. Democratic chief executive John Evans has threatened to shoot down any legislative attempts to tamper with the people-approved law.

The proposal would reduce to $15,000 or 50 percent, whichever is lesser, the market value of residential property exempted from taxation. Under the initiative, the formula is based on values of $50,000 or 50 percent.

Sponsors said the bill would trim to $11.1 million from $19 million the anticipated shift of taxes away from residences and onto business, industrial and other types of property.

Rep. Rachel Gilbert, R-Boise, said she had two main objectives in her bill: shield small businesses from a huge tax shift and prevent "jet-set folks" — wealthy people with vacation homes and rental property — by restricting the exemption to owner-occupied and primary-residence property.

Sponsors said the "50-50" initiative went too far, while a vehement minority said legislators have no business tinkering with the voter-enacted law, which was approved by the electorate last fall.

"If this means a recall for Rachel Gilbert, I'm ready," the sponsor said in her opening debate. "I feel sorry for some of you who are so scared you're going to get dumped in the next

Vote tally

BOISE — Almost all Magic Valley representatives favored striking down portions of the 50-50 homeowners' tax exemption as those amendments cleared the House on Wednesday.

Only three area lawmakers opposed the move, arguing that the people's initiative, which was passed last November, should be honored as a public outcry for property-tax relief, and as such, it should not be tampered with by the Legislature.

The three dissenting votes cast by Magic Valley delegates came from: Reps. Ernest Hale, R-Burley; Dan Kelly, R-Mountain Home; and Mark Larson, D-Mountain Home.

All other House members from the eight Magic Valley counties backed the move to reduce the benefits offered homeowners under the provisions of the initiative.

Quake 'predicted' for southern Idaho

By ELLEN MARKS
United Press International

BOISE — A "major" earthquake is expected to hit southwestern Idaho within the next 20 years, causing destruction of structurally unsound buildings and possible damage to a 165-foot concrete dam, two Boise State University geologists predict.

The center of the quake is expected to be somewhere between Cascade and Lowman, with reverberations that could be felt as far away as Baker, Ore. and Missoula, Mont., Boise State geology research assistant Chuck Meissner said.

Meissner, who detailed his findings in a paper to be released next month, says his predictions are based on past geologic activity along the Deadwood Fault, a 100-mile long system of fractures that runs about 20 miles northeast of Boise.

He predicted the quake would cause "minor" damage in the capital city, with "loosening of older brick structures and quite a bit of broken glass."

He said the quake also could cause problems at Deadwood Dam, a

Senate flip-flops on Swan Falls controversy

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Senate did an unusual flip-flop Wednesday.

It killed a proposed solution to the complex Swan Falls water-right controversy, only to reconsider in the afternoon and pass the measure.

The action also was unique in that the three hours of debate it involved was cited as the longest ever for a joint resolution — a measure that carries no weight of law. Consequently, no other measures were debated Wednesday.

The resolution asks the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to alter Idaho Power's power license at Swan Falls Dam on the Snake River, so that it is open to upstream uses — even though these uses might deplete the river flows.

The resolution already has passed the House. It now will accompany a similar request made by Gov. John Evans, which FERC officials have said they will accept until next Wednesday, March 23.

Meanwhile, an internal opinion from the attorney general released Wednesday apparently clears the way for a proposed state law that would subordinate Idaho Power's state water right at Swan Falls. This differs from the resolution to the FERC, which only applies to the operating license.

"Although I'm sure there will be opposition, I'm confident now that we can pass this bill, both here in the House and over in the Senate," Rep. Vard Chatburn, R-Albion, said after the attorney general, Jim Jones, offered his opinion.

To support his statement, Chatburn cited the resolution's passage as an indicator that the bill also will succeed when it comes up for vote in the House early next week, following minor redrafting.

Last November, the Idaho Supreme Court ruled that Idaho Power's water right at the southwestern Idaho dam is not subordinate to the agricultural development of the 1960s and 1970s that depleted the water flow of the Snake River from the utility's right of 8,400 cubic feet per second. Average flows during summer months now amount to less than 6,000 cubic feet per second.

But the court sent back to district court the question of whether Idaho Power willingly abandoned some of that water by encouraging the irrigation developments, which include all of the high-lift pumping operations near Bliss.

Essentially, the attorney-general's opinion says that the Legislature can subordinate a water right designated for power production. But Idaho Power Vice President Logan Lanham still says such action would be unconstitutional.

The key to Wednesday's opinion, drafted by deputy attorney general Robie Russell, is a constitutional amendment passed by voters in 1928. That amendment was designed to grant the state the power to alter power rights. Russell says this, plus the general police powers granted all states, makes subordination a legal process.

But he also warned that the question of whether Idaho Power must be compensated for any water taken away from it at Swan Falls remains unanswerable until decided by the courts.

And Lanham said later in the day that this remains the key to the utility's objection to subordination — one he says will result in perhaps 4,500 Idahoans being sued for compensation if the Legislature passes the bill. Otherwise, he says, the utility is vulnerable to more lawsuits by its customers, charging that Idaho Power has failed to protect their interests by giving away water.

As an alternative, Lanham says that Idaho Power will promise to voluntarily subordinate its Swan Falls right to existing irrigation investments, if the Legislature will

Court voids indictments

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — A court voided homicide indictments Wednesday against five soldiers in the 1980 slaying of four U.S. churchwomen and ordered the process of gathering evidence to start again, sources said.

The soldiers remained in jail, however, pending the outcome of the new evidence gathering process, which was expected to delay any possible trial another year, the sources said.

"The case is going nowhere," said William Ford, a New York-based lawyer whose sister Ita was one of the four slain missionaries. "The Salvadorans just aren't interested."

Company ordered to clean up

BOISE (UPI) — A federal judge has ordered a Pocatello recycling company to cooperate with an Environmental Protection Agency team in safeguarding water supplies and cleaning up a gravel pit where the firm dumped nearly 600 PCB-contaminated electrical capacitors.

U.S. District Court Judge Marion Callister issued the temporary restraining order Wednesday following a court hearing and a lengthy meeting with attorneys representing the EPA and Pacific Steel-Hide Recycling Co., court officials said.

Callister also scheduled a hearing March 25 in Pocatello for arguments on the government's motion for a permanent injunction against the firm.

Meanwhile, EPA officials at the scene said they would test a city-owned well less than a mile from the scrapyard to determine if toxic PCBs have spread farther than originally suspected.

Suicide suggested by attorney

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Shortly before jurors began deliberating the case, Erin Fleming's attorney suggested Wednesday his client might commit suicide if she loses a bank lawsuit that claims she cheated Groucho Marx out of more than $400,000.

The nine-woman, three-man panel must decide whether Miss Fleming was entitled to the gifts and fees she received from Marx during the last six years of his life or ought to be forced to return them and pay $500,000 damages.

When asked during a lunch break whether he would appeal if the jury decides against Miss Fleming, attorney David Sabih told reporters he probably would not. He then explained:

"She told me if the jury believes that she tortured and mistreated Groucho, like the Bank of America claims, she would have no reason to live.

Allegation source sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., said Wednesday he is trying to find out about allegations that he and his staff bought and used marijuana and cocaine, and urged reporters not to "cannibalize me."

House ethics committee chairman Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, informed Dellums of the allegations about 5:30 p.m. EST Tuesday and said the investigation would remain confidential, a member of Dellums' staff said. Less than two hours later the report was on the network news.

The charges against the congressman were made by Robert Yesh, a former House doorkeeper, CBS News and the Washington Post reported.

Missile splashed in ocean

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — A Soviet test missile splashed down in the Indian Ocean today and was recovered by the Soviet navy, the Australian Defense Department said.

The Defense Department said the test missile came down 300 miles south of the Australian-administered Cocos Islands and was recovered by a group consisting of seven vessels in an operation observed by Australian air and naval units.

Such tests generally involve firing a missile — without a warhead — to check its accuracy.

Cholesterol cut by diet, drug

BOSTON (UPI) — Dangerously high blood cholesterol levels were cut by as much as 50 percent with diet change and a new drug treatment, a Japanese study of a common genetic disorder said Wednesday.

Patients with a specific genetic defect who changed their diet and underwent treatment with two drugs had almost normal cholesterol levels, reported the study in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The disorder, familial hypercholesterolemia, affects one out of every 500 Americans, Europeans and Japanese. People with the disorder run a very strong risk of premature thickening and hardening of artery walls that interferes with blood circulation and contributes to heart disease.

Moon base suggested

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — The space agency should prepare to return to the moon in the mid-1990s and develop it as a base for research and space exploration, scientists said.

"It is possible now to see that in the mid-90s, it will be easy to go to the moon from a technical point of view," said Wendell Mendell, a planetary scientist at the Johnson Space Center.

"Having people on the moon, and having news stories about what they did on the moon's surface each day could be a tremendous morale booster," Mendell said.

People finalists named

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Alan Alda, Burt Reynolds, Dolly Parton, Brooke Shields and Tom Selleck were each named finalists in two categories for Thursday night's ninth annual People's Choice Awards telecast.

The awards are determined by a Gallup Poll of the American public and are given in 18 categories covering movies, television and music. The program will be broadcast on CBS-TV at 9 p.m. EST with Dick Van Dyke as host.

The finalists are the top three vote-getters in each category.

All around male entertainer, Alda, Reynolds and Selleck; all around female entertainer, Carol Burnett, Barbara Mandrell and Miss Parton; male television performer, Alda, Larry Hagman and Selleck; female television performer, Linda Evans, Stefanie Powers and Loretta Swit; movie actor, Henry Fonda, Dustin Hoffman and Reynolds; movie actress, Jane Fonda, Katharine Hepburn and Meryl Streep.

remove the Idaho Public Utilities Commission from governing utilities' water rights. But he also says that future water users will have to purchase the water from Idaho Power "and pay their own way."

However, both Chatburn and Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, argue that the utility's proposal would not ensure water for future agricultural or industrial growth anywhere between Bliss and St. Anthony. Instead, they say, it could open the door for Oregon and Washington to file in federal court on all water passing Swan Falls Dam.

Opponents argued that subordination would: allow the federal government to tamper with state water rights; hike the statewide electrical ratebase by as much as $64 million per year; and set a precedent for the state to renege on vested water rights.

"I submit that we are making Idaho electrical consumers subsidize, to the tune of $60 million a year, a few speculative, agricultural land developers," said Sen. Ron Beitelspacher, D-Grangeville. "They shouldn't have to pay for that."

Sen. Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, charged that subordination would open the door for the state to alter the water rights of farms as well.

But Noh countered Budge's contention by citing passages of the state constitution, which separates water rights by uses, giving priority to agriculture.

Regarding the increased electrical costs created by the loss of cheap hydro power, Sen. Bill Ringert, R-Boise, noted that Idaho Power already is operating its Swan Falls generators below capacity.

"Besides, with the poor farm prices and high costs of pumping, I don't expect to see hardly any further depletion at Swan Falls for some time," Ringert said. "We're not going to see some great land rush if we subordinate this water right to upstream development. The economy won't support it."

The Senate's reversal primarily was spurred by several northern Democrats changing their votes. Reportedly, that shift came after a Democratic caucus at which Gov. Evans' position favoring the resolution was pushed as a means of strengthening his request to the FERC.

However, several Republicans also changed their votes from "no" to "yes" after strong lobbying by Noh and Ringert during the luncheon recess.

The initial vote killing the measure was 13-20. But by afternoon, the vote was 19-14, with all six Magic Valley senators supporting subordination.

election. But some of you have been here too long anyway."

Rep. James Stoicheff, D-Sandpoint, said it was unfair and unfeeling to go against the grain of the electorate.

He called the bill "intellectually dishonest."

"This is an arrogant bill and it deserves a shabby death," Stoicheff said. "You're telling the voters, 'You stupid yokels, you didn't know what you were doing.' This bill takes the meat off the table and leaves a bare, gnawed bone in its place."

Stoicheff and Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, said lawmakers have only themselves to blame, because they rejected bills last year that would have allowed a more moderate residential exemption.

Mrs. Gilbert blasted Stoicheff in closing debate.

"I'm ashamed at those cheap adjectives," she said. "I don't like that kind of debate. Don't call my bill arrogant or dishonest. It's honest and fair."

Proponents of the bill — which was one of three bills offered by a House subcommittee to amend the initiative — rationalized their position with assertions that the voters weren't adequately informed about the potential effects of the measure.

Property-tax Subcommittee Chairman Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, said leaders of the statewide initiative campaign may not have actually lied about the tax structure, "but their information was certainly misleading."

Rep. Rich Orme, R-St. Anthony, said many initiatives need fine-tuning by lawmakers, because the people don't have that ability when they vote on ballot measures.

He said he thought the electorate would repeal the sales and income taxes if they had the chance, even though it might wreck state government.

The "50-50" initiative, while advertised as residential property-tax relief, is merely a tax shift which will boomerang on the taxpayers because businesses would have to increase their prices to cover the additional cost, Orme and other backers said.

"I sincerely believe the people didn't know what they were voting for last fall," Orme said.

Rep. Martin Trillhaase, R-Idaho Falls, complained the Mrs. Gilbert's bill was only the latest example of legislative impropriety.

"If we're going to do this, let's repeal the whole initiative process -- it's meaningless," he said.

Although it is impossible to closely predict earthquakes, geologists can tell when one is likely to occur based on past underground shifting, Meissner said.

"You look at the fault systems that are active, and then you look for a decrease in the number of small earthquakes," he said. "That shows energy building up."

He said there was much shifting along the Deadwood Fault last summer, but little activity since then.

Geophysics professor Paul Donaldson said there is evidence the fault has been active for the past several thousand years and was responsible for major earthquakes in 1916 and 1944.

Kasten may delay Social Security bill

SEN. ROBERT DOLE
Thinks measure important

By D'VERA COHN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Senate tackled a $165 billion Social Security rescue measure Wednesday that raises payroll taxes, curbs benefits and increases the retirement age, but a bank-backed amendment threatened to stall the plan.

The financing plan would keep Social Security solvent through the middle of the next century and the Senate is expected to approve it. The House passed a similar bill March 9.

Senators — who thought they had temporarily laid to rest a controversial amendment to repeal tax withholding on interest and dividends — spent three hours debating the Social Security measure after postponing further action on a $5.1 billion jobs bill until Friday.

However, a spokesman for Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., suggested the controversial amendment may be tacked onto the Social Security measure.

Kasten, with strong backing from banks and savings institutions, has tied the jobs bill in parliamentary knots with his efforts to stop the withholding provision, scheduled to take effect July 1.

When asked if the freshman senator would try to attack the withholding repeal to the Social Security bill, Kasten's press secretary, Ben Banta, said, "He could. ... It is a viable option."

Congressional leaders hope to send a Social Security bill to President Reagan before the March 26 Easter recess. The major provisions are endorsed by bipartisan congressional leaders.

"This may be the single most important piece of legislation considered by the 98th Congress," Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole, R-Kan., said in urging support. He said the bill, which cleared his panel 18-1, must be approved intact.

"If one of these provisions were to fall by the wayside, it is the opinion of this senator we'd probably end up without a compromise," Dole said.

Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., also backing the bill, said, "What is at stake is the stability of and confidence in the single most important social program in existence today."

The Senate accepted several minor amendments to the bill before adjourning for the day, but postponed likely fights on bigger ones.

Among the major amendments expected are proposals by Sen. Russell Long, D-La., to postpone mandatory coverage of federal workers; by Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., to drop payroll tax hikes; by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., to expand the disability program to aid workers hurt by the higher retirement age; and by Dole to provide limited health insurance for unemployed workers.

Japanese internees lodge damage suit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Japanese-American group sued the U.S. government Wednesday for $25.2 billion in damages for more than 120,000 people of Japanese ancestry put in "concentration camps" during World War II.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court on behalf of 25 identified and approximately 120,000 unidentified people placed in relocation centers under the post-Pearl Harbor 1942 executive order of President Franklin Roosevelt.

William Hohri, chairman of the Chicago-based National Council for Japanese American Redress, said the class action lawsuit marked the first time Japanese-Americans' demand for government redress was taken to court.

The council's complaint seeks $10,000 for each of 21 alleged wrongs committed against those imprisoned — $210,00 per victim — and asks the court to declare that the United States violated the Japanese-Americans' constitutional, statutory and civil rights.

The suit charged the government with fabricating claims of "military necessity" in order to expel Japanese-Americans from their homes on the West coast and imprison them.

"The barren, inhumane camps in which plaintiffs were imprisoned by armed guards behind barbed wire ... were publicly referred to as 'relocation centers' ... (but) were in fact 'concentration camps,'" the suit said.

Hohri said Japanese-Americans were rounded up and herded at gunpoint into makeshift camps on the West Coast and Arizona and subjected to a list of wrongs, including unreasonable search and seizure, cruel and unusual punishment, assault and battery and false arrest.

"The list is lengthy because the action was irrational and pervasive," Hohri told a news conference. "The roundup included the very young and the very old, the disabled, the infirm."

He said about 72,000 of those imprisoned were U.S. citizens and 70,000 were women, children, elderly and disabled people who could not have possible posed a security risk to the United States.

"The criterion was racial," Hohri said.

Reagan sends crime bill to Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, stressing a need "to regain the upper hand over the forces of crime," asked Congress Wednesday for quick action on a package of legal changes designed to send more criminal offenders to prison.

Reagan sent to Capitol Hill a 44-point program that would toughen penalties for crimes ranging from child pornography to espionage, limit the insanity defense and give prosecutors and law enforcement officers a freer hand.

In an accompanying letter, Reagan said the package would reform "those aspects of federal criminal law that have proven to be the largest obstacles in our fight against crime."

"Each is important in rolling back the tide of criminal activity that threatens our nation, our families and our way of life," he said.

The 700-page draft bill draws heavily from the anti-crime proposals the administration sent Congress last fall.

Reagan said his administration has acted on its own to improve the coordination and efficiency of federal anti-crime efforts, citing the establishment of regional task forces to combat drug trafficking and an intensified drive to crack down on organized crime.

Although arrests and convictions have risen as a result, he said, "administrative action, however successful, is not enough."

"If the forces of law are to regain the upper hand over the forces of crime, ensuring that criminals are convicted and put and kept behind bars, basic legislative changes are needed," he said.

Among the carryover priorities are restrictions on the use of bail, the establishment of mandatory and more uniform sentences and revision of the "exclusionary rule" to allow the use of evidence obtained by law officers who show a "good faith" belief their actions were legal.

Motivated in part by the acquittal of assailant John Hinckley Jr., Reagan also asked Congress to limit the insanity defense to those unable to appreciate the nature or wrongfulness of their acts and shift the burden of proof to the defendant.

The Reagan package would reinstate the death penalty in certain cases of murder, treason and espionage, toughen provisions against international money laundering and provide for the forfeiture of money and property involved in narcotics trafficking and organized crime.

Navy brass comforted by $1,882 desk chair

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., gave the Navy his monthly "Golden Fleece" award Wednesday for spending $11,225 to decorate the office of a captain at Camp Lejeune, N.C., including an $1,882 desk chair.

Proxmire said the chair in the office of Capt. John Merriott at the Navy's Regional Medical Center cost $500 more than the one President Reagan uses for Cabinet meetings. In addition, guests of the captain sit in chairs that cost nearly $1,100 each.

"This is one commanding officer who sits pretty while the taxpayers are sitting on lighter pockets," Proxmire said.

Navy spokesman Lt. Tom Yeager confirmed Proxmire's figures, but said the Navy did all it could to be cost-conscious in furnishing the office.

Two oriental rugs in the office cost nearly $2,000, Proxmire said, while claiming Merriott's entire 346-square foot office could have been carpeted by the General Services Administration for $700.

The senator's monthly "award" goes to what he considers the most wasteful, ridiculous or ironic use of tax money.

West Coast soggy

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Rain and gusty winds hit the water-soaked Northern California coast Wednesday where work crews have barely finished patching cracked roads and removing mudslides from a series of storms wracking the region since January.

In the entire state, damage from the storms was estimated at $524 million. Twenty-one people have died in connection with the deluges.

The new storm carried winds gusting up to 60 miles per hour as it crossed the coast toward the Sierra and Lake Tahoe basin, where heavy snowfall was predicted.

Flood and high wind warnings were posted throughout the northern counties and coastal areas were warned to prepare for more heavy surf which could batter seaside homes, many of which have already been heavily damaged or destroyed by past storms.

National Weather Service forecaster Ron Wagner said the weather front would dump from one to four inches of rain in the north half of the state during an estimated 12-hour period.

A report by the State Office of Emergency Services said a drying out period was needed to prevent an escalation in homes and property damaged by the torrential downpours.

Some 8,382 homes and 793 business have been damaged or destroyed statewide at an estimated loss of $158 million, a report said. In addition, $121 million in damage has occurred to public roads and other state facilities.

Five die in gas explosion

ODESSA, Texas (UPI) — Firefighters and sheriff's deputies Wednesday recovered the bodies of five people, including a woman and her three children, who died in the explosion of a propane gas pipe punctured by a post hole digger.

The two quick explosions and intense heat which fire officials estimated at 2,000 degrees melted the aluminum mobile home where the woman and three children were found. The fifth body was found near the point where the pipe was ruptured.

Five people were injured, and another mobile home and several nearby vehicles also were destroyed in west Texas.

The post holes were being dug with an auger mounted on a truck, but no one knew whether there was one workman or two. One of the people killed was a workman, but a second man who was critically burned also was the husband of the dead woman.

Marriage survives the turbulent years

Ah, marriage. After years, or maybe we should say decades, of decline and demise, it appears the institution is making something of a comeback.

The reason may not reflect any great increase in love or commitment among couples, but rather a reflection of the poor economy. In short, couples just cannot afford to get divorced in tough times, so they stay together.

But we see some evidence, at least among people we know, that the marriages that have survived the turmoil of the past two decades — or were formed in that period — are stronger and healthier.

Their partners seem to have a different kind of tolerance than the grudging acquiescence we used to see, a new assertiveness in each partner to speak out from his or her perspective. That's often a healthy sign.

The past two or three decades have seen widespread changes in American families. Single-parenting is more common and is becoming accepted. Many, many children are growing up today in something other than the traditional home of a working husband, non-working wife and two kids. Americans are known as an adaptable people, and maybe we're proving it again in the resourcefulness many couples and parents are showing.

Furthermore, millions of women have entered the work force, and both legal and social norms have changed to reflect a new equality of the sexes.

But if marriage is making a comeback, we shouldn't conclude that couples will throw off those changes and return to traditional married roles. We have all come too far for that.

Virtually every marriage we know has been affected by these changes in one way or another, and more than a few have not survived.

But after a couple of "me first" decades, it seems that among many couples there's a new willingness toward sharing, mutual decision-making and willingness to compromise.

Maybe that's behind the decline in the divorce rate, also reported this week. For the first time since 1962, the rate declined last year, dropping 4 percent to 5.1 divorces per year per 1,000 population. Experts at the National Center for Health Statistics, which monitors such things, say the rate may increase when the economy improves, but that the "divorce boom" of the past two decades may be over.

Can't afford rate hike

There should be hearings held in the smaller towns. There are many who cannot attend the telephone meetings in Gooding — the elderly, the handicapped, the person who cannot see well but is not considered blind. Many of us will have to have phone service discontinued. We can't afford this raise.

The Idaho Power Co., the phone company, the high rent and deposits on houses are far out of reason.

It seems everyone from Washington, D.C., to Boise, Idaho, is shafting old people. Where will it all end?

James Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON -- Somewhat in the fashion of Random House or Little, Brown, the Department of Defense last week held a press conference to introduce a new book.

In his role as publisher, Secretary Caspar Weinberger stood at a lectern and touted the work; one of the anonymous authors fielded the reviewers' questions. Only the shrimp and sherry were missing.

The book is "Soviet Military Power" (Government Printing Office, 2nd edition, 107 pages, $6.50). Sad to say, the first reviews were disappointing. The morning Post played the story on Page 14, and the newspaper's top military analysts gave it the old ho-hum and pooh-pooh. They thought the authors had portrayed Soviet weaponry "in largely breathless and uncritical terms." At times, they sniffed, the booklet "reads like a manufacturer's brochure."

For those of us who are not military experts, the new publication makes a more sobering impact. The Pentagon's purpose was to ring an alarm bell, and the data presented in this booklet have precisely that effect. Assuming the accuracy of the figures, we have to believe that Soviet leaders have been engaged in a massive, sacrificial, escalating buildup of armaments all across the board.

A word of caution / - not of skepticism, but of caution -- is in order. In most fields of public interest, it is possible for critics to check sources and to make independent judgments on the validity of an author's conclusions. No such thing is possible here. The data on the Soviets' production of arms presumably were compiled from reports of the National Security Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency, the Central Intelligence Agency and others.

With that caveat on the record, let it be said that the figures are profoundly disturbing. The Soviets are continuing to produce and to deploy ever more menacing nuclear weapons.

The same ominous dedication is seen in the Soviet Union's modernization of conventional forces. Soviet air defenses are now "the most massive in the world." A new version of the "Foxbat" interceptor should enter service soon.

The astonishing expansion of the Soviet navy goes on apace. More than 30 ballistic missile submarines and more than 90 attack submarines now patrol the Pacific. The booklet contains photographs of the Soviet aircraft carrier Minsk; it is not as powerful a fighting machine as our Nimitz-class carriers, but it is impressive all the same.

Weinberger sums up the situation with a reassuring note. While the Soviets' buildup "cannot be wished away or ignored," there is no requirement that the United States "match the Soviets unit for unit, weapons systems for weapons systems." What is required, he says, "is a nuclear and conventional posture that makes any Soviet military operation too uncertain of outcome and too high of cost to be pursued. That posture is in part military sinew and in part national resolve."

The last sentence, it seems to me, says it all. Our own forces, combined with those of our allies, assuredly are not puny, but if the Western world is not to be intimidated, blackmailed or bullied by the Soviet Union, we cannot afford another decade of neglect -- and we cannot permit a perception to develop of any weakness in the national will. Toward that end, the new booklet makes a persuasive case.

For Barbie, only the best treatment

Art Buchwald

I was very disturbed to read in the newspaper the other day that convicted Nazi war criminal Klaus Altmann-Barbie had to undergo an emergency hernia operation in Lyon, where he is awaiting trial for his role in the deaths of hundreds of Jews and resistance fighters.

I immediately called the French Embassy to find out how he was.

"Are you a friend of his?" the embassy official wanted to know.

"Not exactly," I said. "But I am interested in his health. Tell me, was the operation very painful?"

"It might have been," the man said.

"Did he scream a lot? Was he in real agony?"

"I doubt it. I'm sure the doctors gave him anesthesia."

"Oh that's too bad."

"What do you mean, that's too bad?"

"Klaus never believed in anesthesia. He felt a man should be fully conscious when he was worked over. It would have been nice if he was awake when the doctors did it to him."

Barbie is a sick man. He has, besides hernia problems, stomach pain, kidney disease and a nervous disorder."

"Poor Klaus. Does his stomach pains make him retch a lot? You know, double over as if someone kicked him with a boot?"

"I have no idea. Why are you interested?"

"No one likes to be kicked in the stomach. I know Klaus liked to kick other people in the stomach, but he never wanted anyone to do it to him."

"I don't understand where this conversation is leading."

"I told you. I'm just interested in Klaus Barbie's health and I want to make sure he's getting the best medical help available. You say he has kidney trouble. He must be very uncomfortable."

"The French doctors are taking very good care of him."

"I'm sure of that. But tell them not to give Klaus any painkillers."

"Why not?"

"Klaus never believed in painkillers. He said painkillers dulled the mind and senses. I'm sure if he wouldn't prescribe them for others, he wouldn't want any for himself. Tell me about the nervous disorder."

"From what we know he can't sleep at night."

"Poor Klaus. He used to sleep so well in Lyon. Don't let the doctors give him anything to get a good night's rest. Barbie always maintained the less you let a person sleep, the more willing he was to cooperate with his captors. Be sure and shine a light in his eyes all night long. He likes that."

"How do you know what he likes?"

"He used to do it all the time to the people in his care. He wouldn't have done it if he didn't believe a bright light was good for someone who needed sleep."

"Are you a doctor?" the man at the embassy asked.

"Not exactly. But when someone like Klaus Barbie gets sick, I like to be of help. Have the French doctors hit his kidneys with a night stick?"

"I'm sure they haven't."

"They might try it. Klaus always said hitting a person in the kidneys was a good way to make him forget his hernia problems."

"I don't think the doctors are about to hit Barbie in the kidneys with a night stick."

"I guess not. Maybe the cure is an old wives' tale or maybe Barbie made it up during World War II. What else is wrong with him?"

"He's also supposed to have a heart condition."

"Poor Klaus. It's as if his entire professional life has caught up with him. The man must be miserable."

"I imagine he is."

"How miserable?"

"I have no idea. Why is it so important to you how miserable he is?"

Supreme Court entangled in reverse discrimination case

George Will

WASHINGTON -- Such is the tangled web we have woven in race policy, the Supreme Court is now being urged, in the name of civil rights, to uphold a lower court decree establishing a new form of segregation.

Unless the Court overturns the decree concerning Boston's police department, judges may establish job entitlements for government-approved minorities, and may disregard state laws when fine-tuning those entitlements.

In 1970 blacks and Hispanics comprised 16.3 percent of Boston's population, but only 2.2 percent of police officers. After several years of litigation a court ordered Boston to give preference to hiring blacks and Hispanics until their percentage in the department approximated their percentage in the population. There was no judicial finding of purposeful discrimination, only a finding that minorities were denied "equal protection" of the law because they were adversely affected by hiring criteria that were not sufficiently job-related.

Since the court-ordered reverse discrimination in hiring began in 1973, 46 percent of the persons hired by the police department have been minorities. By July 1981, they comprised 11.7 percent of the force. But by then they comprised 30 percent of Boston's population. Then another complication emerged: Voters passed a tax-reduction initiative, which resulted in the need to reduce the police force. Massachusetts law establishes a seniority system, requiring police officers to be laid off on a last-hired, first-fired basis. That would have reduced the minority component of the force to 6.2 percent. So a court declared the state law inoperative and imposed segregated seniority lists.

On the basis of those lists, layoffs were to be conducted so as to keep the July 1981 level (11.7 percent) of minorities. Some white officers with 11 years service were fired while minority officers with only two years service -- who had not suffered discrimination -- were retained.

The Anti-Defamation League, a Jewish organization long identified with civil-rights causes, has filed a brief urging the Supreme Court to overturn the lower court's action because (among other reasons) that court exceeded its remedial powers when it tried to "correct" a social development unrelated to discrimination.

The brief notes that in a 1971 school case the Court held that there is "no substantive constitutional right (to a) particular degree of racial balance or mixing" after a constitutional violation has been remedied. In a 1976 school case the Court held that a federal court has no power to mandate a correction of a racial "imbalance" that occurred in a school as a result of population changes subsequent to desegregation measures and unrelated to discrimination. Yet in the current case, the lower court's decree implies a judicial power to create for government-approved minorities a perpetual right to a proportionate share of certain jobs.

Furthermore, it implies a virtually uncircumscribed judicial power to command this result, regardless of the reasons why the result requires a command.

The League's brief notes that in 1977 the Court limited "retroactive seniority" to identifiable victims of discrimination. The brief argues that the lower court's creation of a racially segregated seniority system in Boston is an abuse of the judiciary's equity power.

The Weber case (1979) concerned a privately negotiated agreement that prevented white employees from applying for half the openings in a company's advancement training program. In upholding the agreement the Court stressed that the plan did not require the discharge of white workers, and that the injury to white employee's expectations was counterbalanced by injury done to blacks by intentional discrimination.

A 1980 case concerned the power of Congress to foreclose white contractors from bidding on 10 percent of some new federal contracts. In upholding Congress's action the Court stressed the marginal nature of the unfairness and the fact that the measure was temporary. In Boston the lower court's various remedial efforts have been under way for nearly a decade and the logic of the decree at issue is that the court's supervision of the police department's personnel policies can be perpetual.

Those who hope the lower court's extraordinary action will be upheld (the NAACP, for example) favor inflicting injury on a class of persons who are guilty of no unlawful behavior, who have benefited from no unlawful behavior and whose injury derives solely from their skin pigmentation (white).

Those who want racial proportionality -- the perpetual parceling out of benefits on the basis of pigmentation or origin -- to be public policy, should urge legislatures to try to make it so. Then courts could try to square this divisive emphasis on immutable characteristics with this premise of our political order: rights inhere in individuals, not groups.

Speed limit bill heads for House floor

BOISE (UPI) — A legislative committee grudgingly referred to the House floor Wednesday a bill allowing people to drive up to 70 mph on Idaho's highways at the risk of only a $5 fine for exceeding the existing 55 mph limit.

The House Transportation Committee first voted 6-4 against a motion to send the bill to the floor with a favorable recommendation.

But the panel immediately afterward approved on a 9-1 ballot a motion by the bill's sponsor, Rep. Martin Trillhaase, R-Idaho Falls, to channel the bill out to the House's amendment calendar.

There, representatives will consider changing the bill so it would apply only to interstate highways, Trillhaase said.

The sponsor said many people already ignore the 55 mph limit, which he said is an "artificial" standard enacted one decade ago by the federal government as a fuel-saving measure.

Since then, however, the need to conserve gasoline has waned, Trillhaase said — adding that no additional "safety factor" is involved by driving faster than 55 mph, and up to 70 mph, on a major highway.

Trillhaase underwent fire from a Nampa man who said he became interested in the bill because of his experiences with speeding trucks while he traveled the state's highways in a motor home.

Clyde Keithly, who told the committee he was a retired insurance agent, said reducing the fine for violating the 55 mph limit from about $50 to only $5 would encourage dangerous speeding and cost lives.

"Speed kills. You're going to see 20 or 30 more deaths by the end of the year if you pass this bill," Keithly said, waving a copy of the proposal at Trillhaase. "You're opening up a slaughterhouse in Idaho."

Rep. Richard Adams, D-Grangeville, said the measure could spur a surge in speeding along treacherous stretches of U.S. 12 from Lewiston to Montana.

But Trillhaase, receiving backing from Rep. Dean Haagenson, R-Coeur d'Alene, said police still would be able to levy large fines against drivers who drove wrecklessly or violated the "basic rule" of safe motoring.

After a majority of the committee voted against recommending that the entire House approve the bill, however, Trillhaase suggested the measure be amended to apply it only to interstate highways, "to make the bill more palatable."

Pop tax proposal shot down again

BOISE (UPI) — The sponsor of a twice-defeated proposal to impose an excise tax on soft drinks said Wednesday some testimony delivered by a chief critic of the measure was "less than factual."

But that claim by Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, still wasn't enough to persuade the House Revenue and Taxation Committee to consider the measure a third time.

The panel refused on a voice vote to resurrect the proposal — killed two times earlier in the session.

Hollifield's bill, which would raise an estimated $15 million for Idaho's general fund each year, was lambasted by Idaho Retailers Association President Tim Brennan as an administrative nightmare for distributors, retailers and state tax officials.

Brennan, at earlier committee hearings, said those administrative costs would eat up much of the income for the state under the new tax.

"Some of the information he gave us was less than factual," Hollifield told the committee Wednesday.

Hollifield, vice chairman of the committee, said he did more research on the issue after the last hearing and found that handling the tax would not be merely as burdensome as Brennan predicted.

The veteran House member noted that North Carolina has taxed soft drinks since 1969, with minimal problems. And he said several other states, including Nevada and Oregon, are considering a soft-drink tax.

House wants tighter lobbyist controls

By United Press International

BOISE (UPI) — Legislative lobbyists in Idaho might be forced to keep more accurate records of the money they spend on individual lawmakers.

Voting 66-0, the House passed and sent to the Legislature's upper chamber a bill that would prohibit lobbyists from attributing all expenses of a group function to a specific lawmaker.

A lobbyist would be required to report as having been spent on a legislator only those funds specifically used to pay for food, entertainment or refreshments for that official.

If the law is enacted, the public would see "a true picture of what is spent on us," floor sponsor Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, told the House.

Ms. McDermott said she and several colleagues have been victimized by "unfair, astronomical quotations" of lobbyists' expenses, which must be listed in legally required "Sunshine" expenditure reports filed in the Idaho secretary of State's office.

She said she had a cup of coffee and a salad at one gathering, but the lobbyist who paid for the event attributed the entire expense to her, since she was the sole lawmaker in attendance.

"I still remember the newspaper headline — 'McDermott feted by $900 dinner,'" she said.

"I'm obviously not underfed while we're here, but not to that extent," Ms. McDermott said.

In other House action Wednesday, representatives:

• Received from the House State Affairs Committee a bill that would double to $10 the monthly parking charge per vehicle in the Capitol Mall across the street from the Statehouse. Under the bill, top elected state officials such as the governor, lieutenant governor, speaker of the House and Senate president pro tem would lose their free-parking privileges.

• Passed 70-0 a bill exempting from the recently enacted one-cent sales-tax increase those construction contractors who prior to March 1 — the effective date of the hike — signed agreements for work after the increase took force. The exemption would apply only for materials purchased to fulfill the contracts.

• Approved and submitted to Gov. John Evans for his signature a Senate-passed bill allocating $14,600 to the state Industrial Services Department for extra expenses during the remainder of fiscal year 1983.

• Concurred 47-23 in Senate amendments to a bill the House passed several weeks ago, aiming to allow fraternal organizations and civic clubs to more easily obtain state licenses to sell liquor by the drink.

• Sent to the printer on the recommendation of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee a slightly revised version of an earlier bill which would establish a state "piggy bank." The bill, drafted by Rep. James Lucas, R-Moscow, would direct that any surplus general-account money at the end of each fiscal year be funneled into an emergency fund for education programs.

The Senate spent much of its day wrangling over a memorial on Snake River water rights, finally approving the measure urging Congress to subordinate Idaho Power Co.'s interests at Swan Falls Dam.

But the Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee found time to endorse for a vote by the entire chamber a bill to empower the state Education Board to prescribe courses at Idaho's four higher-education institutions at Moscow, Lewiston, Boise and Pocatello.

Committee unveils tax hike package to House

BOISE (UPI) — House tax planners Wednesday gave the Legislature its first long look at a package of $40 million in proposed tax increases, setting the stage for the lower chamber's Republicans to finally initial a fiscal 1984 budget target.

Despite those two developments, the budget-setting process remained in neutral.

Rep. Kathleen "Kitty" Gurnsey, R-Boise, head of the House Appropriations Committee, said it appeared possible that no formal action on the budget front would be taken until after the House held a "test" vote on the tax-hike package.

To some legislators — and particularly Sen. David Little, R-Emmett, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee — a determination on whether the state would have sufficient revenue to cover a $440 million budget should be made before any budgets are passed.

Because state revenue under the current tax structure would reach only slightly more than $400 million by most estimates, some $40 million in tax increases would be needed to hit the budget target. That goal still would be $3 million less than spending in the current year and about $35 million short of the total sought by Democratic Gov. John Evans and many Democratic legislators.

"A lot could be cleared up if we got that tax bill right to the House floor," Mrs. Gurnsey said. "A vote on that would be a great test."

While Republican lawmakers have been jockeying for position on how much revenue to raise and what bottom-line budget figure to set, the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee has remained in a holding pattern for two weeks.

Panel kills tax bill

BOISE (UPI) — A proposal to virtually eliminate Idaho's inheritance tax took a nose dive Wednesday in the House Revenue and Taxation Committee.

Sen. Dane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls, said the so-called "death tax" is outdated and should be wiped out.

To make up for the expected revenue loss in the repeal action, the bill would raise the state cigarette tax from 9.1 cents per pack to 9.4 cents per pack.

But Craigmont Democratic Rep. Harold Reid, a vetern House tax-writer, said the state's inheritance tax was fined-tuned two years ago and should not be changed now.

The committee agreed with Reid, killing the Watkins proposal on a unanimous voice vote.

"I'm not an expert in this field, but I have an interest in it," Watkins told the committee.

He said the state still would collect inheritance tax revenue, but only indirectly. The state inheritance tax would be eliminated — costing the state about $250,000 in fiscal year 1984 — but the federal government still would return so-called "pickup tax" revenue to the state from collections of federal inheritance taxes.

After the hearing, Watkins acknowledged his father's will is now in probate proceedings. However, Watkins said his bill would have no impact on that matter because it would not take force until later this year — two years after his father's death.

Move prompts father's suit

BOISE (UPI) — A California man has filed a lawsuit in U.S. District Court against his ex-wife, her present husband and the man's employer, claiming they conspired to prevent him from seeing his 8-year-old daughter when they moved to Saudi Arabia.

Thomas Barnes of San Bernadino filed the lawsuit Wednesday, seeking damages of $850,000 plus a $1,500 daily penalty against Steve and Teresa Barnard and Aramco Services Co. He said he also is seeking $100,000 in lawyers' fees.

Barnes, a former Idaho resident, said he was granted rights to visit his daughter, Kristin, for five or six weeks each year from 1980 through 1982 when he and Teresa Barnard were divorced in 1976.

But he claims his ex-wife and her husband, with help from Aramco, conspired to deprive him of his visitation rights by removing the girl from Idaho last year without his knowledge or consent.

Barnes said the company helped the Barnards take Kristin when they moved, despite promising it would not let the girl leave Idaho without his approval. He also claimed Aramco executives lied about the girl's departure date.

The Barnards are now living in Udhaliya, Saudi Arabia, where Steve Barnard works for Aramco, Barnes said.

He said Kristin lived only with her mother after the divorce until 1979, when they moved in with Teresa and Steve Barnard. Barnes said his ex-wife remarried in August 1980.

Pneumonia, emphysema kill Godfrey

NEW YORK (UPI) — Arthur Godfrey, the ukelele-playing radio and television personality whose folksy manner won him millions of fans, died Wednesday of pneumonia and emphysema. He was 79.

The spokesman for the entertainer said Godfrey, who battled lung cancer for more than 25 years, died "peacefully" at Mount Sinai Hospital. A hospital spokeswoman said Godfrey, hospitalized since March 3, died at 11:57 a.m. MST.

At his peak in the late 1940s, Godfrey was probably the best known personality in the history of radio in the United States.

The "old redhead," with his ukulele and what were considered at the time off-color jokes, was still so well-known by 1960 that he rated ahead of Richard Burton and John Kennedy in a "recognition" poll.

Godfrey was married in 1938 to the former Mary Bourke. They had two sons, Richard and Mike, and a daughter, Pat.

Godfrey was an aviation buff and plugged flying so much that World War I flying ace Eddie Rickenbacker said the entertainer had done more for the industry than anyone since Lindbergh.

When he contracted lung cancer, he made his fight against that killer a matter of national interest. His cancerous lung was removed in one of the first successful operations of that nature. Twenty-five years later he was still active but sometimes indicated difficulty in breathing.

His public firing of singer Julius LaRosa for not being faithful to the Godfrey radio "family" became a subject of household debate.

In 1948, Godfrey made his television debut with the program "Talent Scouts" and the next year began the long-running "Arthur Godfrey and His Friends" — one of the biggest attractions on early television.

At the time, he had mixed emotions about television.

"Some of it is excellent," Godfrey said. "M-A-S-H, for instance, is terrific. Some of it stinketh. We have singers on the air today who couldn't get arrested back in the days when we chose people because they had voices, could sing on pitch and you could understand their words.

"Nowadays, you don't have to do that. You just take the same words and repeat them over and over and over ... America is suffocating nowadays in mediocrity."

Godfrey's voice was his fortune, that and his home folks manner, and he parlayed it into a personal wealth in the millions which permitted him to retire on an 800-acre Virginia estate where he espoused horse breeding.

Born Aug. 31, 1903, in New York City, Godfrey was raised in Hasbrouck Heights, N.J. His father was a newspaper and magazine writer, but family reverses sent him out on his own at the age of 15. He worked as office boy, coal miner, farmhand, bus boy, short order cook, tire finisher and cemetery lot salesman.

In 1920 he enlisted in the Navy and served as a radio operator on a destroyer assigned to Mediterranean duty.

He later joined the Coast Guard and appeared as an amateur playing the banjo on a Baltimore radio station. On discharge from the Coast Guard he got a job as an announcer at WFBR.

He was the pioneer of the "kid the commercial" technique. One day he received copy for a Washington department store about "filmy, clingy, alluring silk underwear in devastating pink and black."

Godfrey got off some irreverent remarks about the copy. The store was swamped with buyers.

Godfrey went to New York in 1941 and by 1945 got his big break with CBS, which gave him a half-hour of morning network time.

By 1948 "Arthur Godfrey and His Friends" was the best known program on radio, with an estimated audience of 40 million. He retired from active broadcasting in 1971, but occasionally appeared in television commercials.

German army mothers wash hands of laundry

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — The army mothers of West Germany are in revolt. Many complain they have to spend weekends washing their sons' uniforms because official laundries are inefficient.

Less than one in 10 soldiers in the 50-percent conscript West German armed forces uses service laundries, Parliamentary Commissioner Karl-Wilhelm Berkhan said in his annual report Wednesday.

Berkhan, whose job is to safeguard servicemen's rights, said enlisted men complained the laundries took too long to clean uniforms and were inconvenient. So they took their uniforms home at weekends and on leave and asked Mom to do it for them, Berkhan said.

"I can well understand the reluctance of many mothers to do this extra work. I have received many complaints from them," Berkhan said.

Berkhan urged the Defense Ministry to clear bottlenecks in the army laundries to speed up service and said officers should tailor their demands on cleanliness and neatness accordingly.

He also pressed the government for more flexibility in call-up procedures for conscripts so that compulsory 15-month military service did not interfere with their private lives and careers.

Dreyfuss to marry Sunday

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Actor Richard Dreyfuss, star of "The Goodbye Girl," "Jaws" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," will marry writer-producer Susan Davis on Sunday.

A spokesman for the actor said Tuesday that the marriage will be the first for Dreyfuss, 34, and second for Ms. Davis, who works in New York under the stage name of Jeramie Rain.

Miss Rain has played small parts in daytime soap operas and is working as a writer-producer for CBS in New York.

Dreyfuss won an Academy Award for his performance in "The Goodbye Girl," and recently starred in "Whose Life Is It Anyway?"

The actor was hospitalized last October for three days in Los Angeles after he crashed his car into tree. Hospital personnel found two vials containing a small amount of cocaine and 31 tablets of the pain-killing narcotic Percodan.

Dreyfuss later said in an interview that cocaine was hurting his acting and had quit the drug. He was allowed to enter a drug diversion program rather than stand trial for possession of cocaine.

Dog leaves large will

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — The Lukemia Society is at least $500,000 richer following the death of BeBe, a 16-year-old miniature poodle that lived on a trust fund established by her millionaire owner.

Naiomi Karins, a San Antonio bookkeeper and BeBe's guardian, said she was "in a state of shock" after the dog's death Tuesday at veterinary clinic.

For the past five years, BeBe had lived from a $600,000 trust fund established by Bodie Cominoll, who with her husband owned the landmark Pioneer Hotel and Restaurant in Woodside, Calif., south of San Francisco. She died "a millionaire many times over," said Mrs. Karins, who was the woman's niece.

Mrs. Cominoll, who died of Lukemia at age 72, entrusted BeBe's care to Mrs. Karins, who recalled her aunt's last request: "She told me, 'It's just that I worry about who'll take care of BeBe.' I told her I'd take care of the dog and that she shouldn't worry."

Mrs. Karins, who periodically reported the dog's condition to the California court administering the will, said everything her aunt touched "turned to money. But without any children all her love went to her dog."

With BeBe's death, the unused trust dollars and the proceeds from Mrs. Cominoll's house and furniture will go to the Lukemia Society — at least $500,000 and perhaps more.

BeBe was buried Wednesday at the Pet Memorial Park in an individualized casket in her own private cemetary plot.

Herve Villechaize, the 3-foot-11 actor who plays Tattoo on TV's "Fantasy Island," says life is not a bowl of cherries when you're a big star. "People are always patting me on the head and girls are always asking me to sit on their knee," says Villechaize, in Nashville to tape a television show with Louise Mandrell. The Richard M. Nixon library won't be built at the University of California at Irvine, either. Assistant chancellor Ramon Curiel said Tuesday the Nixon Archives Foundation apparently withdrew its proposal to locate the library at the southern California campus because of university qualms about giving space to a Nixon museum. Marjorie Caserio, head of the Irvine campus's Academic Senate, said many faculty members are concerned that the museum part of the facility "might represent a glorification of the Nixon image." UC Irvine is 20 miles north of San Clemente, home of the former-president's Western White House. A number of universities and cities have rejected the idea of having the library.

Voters in Philadelphia's Democratic City Council primary May 17 won't have to decide between two David Cohens after all. Or Allen Cohen either. Incumbent Councilman David Cohen complained last week that voters would be confused by the candidacy of the other David Cohen, a retired businessman who had dropped his normally used middle initial, and by another surprise candidate, Allen Cohen. Both lesser-known Cohens have now dropped off the ballot. Councilman Cohen said families of the two men told him it was not their intention to hurt his election chances.

The youngest member of Congress says the wasteful attitude of much of the legislative staff on Capitol Hill borders on being "criminal." Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., said budget documents given to him last week were riddled with numerical errors. "The smallest mistake was $10 million. The largest was $2 billion," said the 28-year-old lawmaker who defeated the daughter of Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker in last November's election. "The sad thing was not a single committee staff member apologized for what happened. Such an incredible wasteful attitude toward taxpayers' dollars borders on the criminal."

President Reagan says musicians like Willie Nelson and Merle Haggard "understand our love of country ... and God." Reagan greeted the two men and other country and western entertainers at a White House reception Tuesday night in honor of the 25th anniversary of the Country Music Association.

Bombs

Explosive safely defused

LONDON (UPI) — A second letterbomb mailed to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in as many days was safely defused Wednesday and police said they believed it might have been sent by Scottish nationalists.

A Scotland Yard spokesman said the latest letter had no connection with two letter bombs — both identical — one sent to Mrs. Thatcher's office and the other to the U.S. Navy's European headquarters 24 hours earlier.

Police said they were investigating if Tuesday's devices were the work of a Ukrainian anarchist group, suspected of mailing similar letter bombs to the U.S. and Soviet Embassies and Soviet tourist and airline offices in London recently.

Wednesday's device addressed to Mrs. Thatcher by hand was contained in a brown manila envelope, a police spokesman said. It was spotted by a postal worker in the sorting office and defused by police bomb experts.

"Anti-terrorist squad officers are looking seriously at claims by the Scottish National Liberation Army that it sent it," the spokesman said.

He said a caller claiming to represent the SNLA telephoned a British news agency office in Edinburgh Monday to say letterbombs turning up in the next few days would be from the Scottish organization.

"We are not sure the call was genuine," the spokesman said, "but we think this device came from them since it was similar to devices they have mailed in the past."

The SNLA last month sent a letter bomb to the office of the mayor of Glasgow that arrived the day Princess Diana of Wales was to visit.

Device found on Navy base

TOKYO (UPI) — Police increased patrols in the port city of Sasebo Wednesday following the discovery of a bomb at the base where the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise will dock.

A hole in the wire fence surrounding the 300-acre Sasebo U.S. Navy base was found Tuesday, indicating "someone from outside sneaked in to plant the device," a police spokesman said.

A Japanese bomb disposal unit and U.S. Navy authorities said the device, hidden under a U.S. military munitions store, was filled with gasoline and had batteries and a timer, the spokesman said.

An anonymous telephone caller Tuesday warned of Molotov cocktail attacks against the base, where security was tightened in advance of the Enterprise's five-day port call set to begin Monday, the spokesman said.

"The patrol is further intensified," a police spokesman said.

The caller, who identified himself as a member of the "Kansai Regional Revolutionary Army," said: "We have launched Molotov-cocktail attacks against the U.S. ammunition dump to protest against the Enterprise's visit."

The Kansai group is part of the extreme leftist "Chukaku" organization, an offshoot of the radical student movement of the 1960s, with an estimated membership of 800.

Police said the organization has been linked to many anti-government and anti-American demonstrations in recent years, including protests against the construction of Narita International Airport outside Tokyo.

Security was already tight because of threats to disrupt the first visit in 15 years of the Enterprise to a Japanese port.

Saudi Arabia cuts crude oil price $5

LONDON (UPI) — Saudi Arabia has cut OPEC's benchmark crude oil by $5 a barrel in two separate steps and implemented the oil cartel's agreement to lower its base price for the first time in history, industry sources said Wednesday.

An industry official said OPEC's other Persian Gulf producers had been waiting for the Saudis to take the lead and would announce their own price drops. OPEC's base price is pegged to Saudi oil, which had been at $34 a barrel since November 1981.

"The Saudi price reduction comes in two stages, the first backdated to Feb. 1 which takes the price down by $4 to $30 a barrel," said a Western oil company executive who asked not to be identified.

"In the second stage, the Saudi price comes down another $1 a barrel, effective from March 15," he said.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed Monday to slash its base price by 15 percent to $29 a barrel from $34 a barrel to prevent a global pricing free-for-all.

OPEC Secretary General Marc Nguema told Radio France International that if a price war broke out and world oil prices sunk to $20 a barrel, only OPEC would be able to sell its oil, the OPEC news agency reported.

"OPEC is necessary," Nguema said. "If it did not exist, one would have to invent it."

He said Mexico, a major OPEC rival, had acted in "conformity" with OPEC in the current oil price crisis. Mexico lowered its best oil to $29 a barrel only after OPEC reached an accord, which barred members from backdating reductions before Feb. 1.

Proposed price cuts for Britain's and Norway's non-OPEC North Sea crude also have been backdated to Feb. 1.

Industry sources said Saudi officials were holding talks with the four U.S. partners in the Arabian-American Oil Co., which produces the bulk of the kingdom's oil, and would announce the price cuts shortly.

"Other Persian Gulf countries are waiting for the Saudi announcement. They won't announce their prices until the Saudis take the lead," an industry official said.

Stalemate only favors Soviets, says Reagan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, advised that only the Soviets stand to gain from a continued stalemate, reassured Lebanese envoys Wednesday of his determination to end their nation of Israeli and other foreign forces.

Former Lebanese Prime Minister Saeb Salam told reporters after a half-hour meeting in the Oval Office he was "very deeply struck" by the president's statement that "he had no reverse gear on this policy" of stabilizing Lebanon and pressing ahead toward full withdrawal and Middle East settlement.

Salam made it clear Israel's demands for a continuing presence in southern Lebanon is unacceptable just as Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, earlier this week, stressed his government's belief Beirut will not be able to control its territory for some time to come.

"We can't have anything that infringes on the sovereignty of Lebanon or that affects the vital interests of Lebanon," Salam said.

The withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces has been the topic of discussions in Washington this week between U.S. officials, including Secretary of State George Shultz, and representatives of Lebanon and Israel.

"There has been progress but no breakthrough," the official said Wednesday assessing the meetings. "We have floated some new ideas," he said.

Members of Salam's party have been jubilant over what they perceive as a strong stand by Reagan to free Lebanon of all foreign troops.

Among the major issues of contention are Israel's worries about the security of its northern border with Lebanon and, "How do you reassure the Palestinians on their security," the official said.

Earlier in the week, Reagan met with Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who returned to Israel Wednesday saying he had "some new ideas" after five days of talks in Washington.

Salam, who was accompanied by Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem, characterized their half-hour with Reagan as a "very good and useful meeting" and said "great efforts were being deployed" by the United States "to help Lebanon."

Rate hike proposal called ill-timed

By KELLY EVERITT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A proposal by Mountain Bell to increases its basic rates for residential phone service by 87 percent to 119 percent of current costs means many rural customers may be forced to give up their telephones.

That was the conclusion of several persons testifying at an Idaho Public Utilities Commission hearing Wednesday night in Gooding.

"I've talked to a lot of my neighbors," Connie Williams of Burley told PUC Commissioner Conley Ward, who chaired the Gooding hearing, "and they say the phone is going to go" if the proposed rate increases go into effect.

"I'm more than upset" about the proposal, she said. "I live on a fixed income, and who can afford a $30 basic rate?

"When you live in a rural area, you need your phone. You just can't get up and go driving off for everything you need," she said, indicating that the increased rates would break the budget of many persons, including herself, who live on a fixed income.

Roger Sherman, also of Burley, called the rate-increase proposal "very ill-timed, given the economic condition in southern Idaho."

"We've been hit with a 13 percent increase in natural gas costs, (electric-rate) increases to pay for WPPSS and wholesale (electric) rate increases from BPA (the Bonneville Power Administration) . . . and (Mountain Bell) now wants to add insult to injury by raising this (the basic-rate service costs) 100 percent," he said.

Noting that Mountain Bell was asking for the rate hike in conjunction with another request before the PUC that would raise the return it is allowed to make on stockholders' investments from 14 percent to 17 percent, Sherman said, "even those people with jobs are not getting increases like that."

And echoing the complaints of several other persons who testified, Sherman said, "I think the increases are discriminatory against rural areas," where the proposed basic-rate increases will go up much higher than in major cities such as Boise or Salt Lake City. "Competition is coming, but we're not seeing it in the rural areas."

Di Bowler, who lives between Bliss and Hagerman, agreed with that contention.

"I don't think they've (Mountain Bell) ever been happy about serving rural areas. It took us 15 years (of requests) just to get private lines into the Hagerman Valley.

"The base rate now is $36 (where she lives), and if that will increase at the rate proposed, we just can't afford it.

"Why," Bowler asked, "is it that every time the government deregulates a service, it costs more? They deregulated the airline industry, and you can't get a plane out of Twin Falls any more."

The proposed increases in basic rates -- the rates charged for access to phone lines and local calls -- stem from the forthcoming break-up of

Phone purchase plan generates confusion

By KELLY EVERITT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A plan that would allow, but not require, customers of Mountain Bell to purchase their own telephones has received tentative approval from the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

However, the proposal has generated considerable confusion among the general public, according to Dean Argyle, a spokesman for the telephone company.

"People do not have to buy their telephones, at least at present," Argyle said Wednesday.

In addition, he said, "we have 20 days to evaluate the impact of this (proposal) on our subscribers before giving a final filing of our comments to the PUC." There could be some changes, including the effective date of the proposal, as a result, he said.

According to a statement released by the PUC, unless a substantial number of protests are received by March 31, the sale plan will go into effect April 1.

Under the optional sale plan, both rotary and Touchtone versions of the standard, Princess and Trimline model telephones would be available for purchase in either a lump sum or four monthly installments.

Those who purchase their telephones would no longer pay monthly lease charges for the sets, which now range from 93 cents to $2.48 cents a month, depending on the model.

However, as part of the plan, new residential customers will no longer have the option of leasing their phones, as they do at present. New customers would have to purchase their phones from Mountain Bell's remaining inventory, from American Bell, or from any of the new firms supplying phones.

The proposal has been triggered by the federal divestiture order affect-

Kimberly may set recall election

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — Kimberly city politics may be either settling down or on the brink of a multiple recall election.

As of Wednesday — nearly one month since the last major development in the ongoing recall petition drives against the Kimberly city officials — no one could say for certain.

Neither of the two recall camps had filed the petitions that would launch a recall election.

But each side now claims the 127-plus signatures that would be required to force the election.

"Several people have petitions out," says Karen Mack, a spokesman for the recall drive against Mayor RosaLea Whitehead and Councilmen Ted Wasko, Avis Allen and Sterling Crothers. "I'm sure we have ample signatures now."

Mack said the petitions will be filed by the end of the month.

That petition drive began in early February in response to a controversial City Council decision to reappoint Bill Malone as the city's public-works director and the law firm of Langley and Groenwood of Twin Falls as the city's legal counsel.

On March 15, Langford was named in a separate recall petition, launched by opponents of the initial recall against Whitehead, Wasko, Allen and Crothers. The opponents hope the threat against Langford will scare off the recall drive against the other city officials.

"It looks like it's dying on the vine," said Margaret Jones, a spokesman for the second recall drive. "If they file theirs, we'll file ours. It's ready to go. Like I say, we've got far over the signatures we need."

Dancer Rocky Brink bares 'almost all' for an all-women audience at The Venture Inn in Filer

Act for women only is a hit

FILER -- A crowd of 85 to 90 women, between the ages of 25 and 70, watched Rocky Brink of Twin Falls discard some of his clothes Tuesday night at the Venture Inn in Filer.

According to bar manager Bessie Austin, the idea for a male dancer to perform during a "ladies-only" night at her bar arose from a joking request by some of her female patrons a few weeks ago.

The once-only show, she said, "was just clean fun. There was nothing dirty about it. Rocky's a good belly dancer."

For Brink, an amateur dancer who is unemployed, it was an opportunity to earn $100, plus tips — about $12 stuffed in his briefs by the women as he danced around the tables.

Most of the spectators seemed to enjoy themselves, too.

"We laughed all night," said Darci Zea, 29, an Idaho Frozen Foods office employee.

Dam patching moving along swiftly

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH -- Construction crews and engineers have located the source of the leak in Milner Dam.

They expect to have it patched -- and the dam completely reconstructed -- by Saturday evening.

Warren Travis, the manager of the Twin Falls Canal Co., said Wednesday that canal companies may begin storing irrigation water behind the dam as early as the first of next week.

But officials say the cause of the leak may never be known.

The leak was discovered Monday, when canal company workers were closing dam gates in cooperation with state officials who wished to monitor the water flow of the Snake River near Thousand Springs.

Once it got going, about 150 to 200 cubic feet of water per second were passing through the leak in the earth and rock structure, Travis said. The area eroded by the leak measured eight square feet by the time crews completed a protective coffer dam around it Tuesday, he said.

Norm Young, an administrator of the regulatory permit section of the state Department of Water Resources, said Wednesday that a team of inspectors had been sent to the site Tuesday to see if "the situation was indeed in hand."

But the state would accept a report by CH2M Hill, the engineers for the Twin Falls Canal Co., as sufficient evidence that repairs had been made adequately, he said.

The department will make a visual inspection of the dam, he said, but there will be "very little delay" by the department in allowing irrigation companies to begin storing water behind the dam.

Travis says the canal companies had scheduled water deliveries as early as March 25 this year. And he expects no delays in meeting those commitments.

Water is being stored upstream from Milner Dam while the repairs are made.

There was some disagreement about how serious the situation actually might have been Monday.

Due to its rock core, Travis believes the dam never would have failed totally. But Young says the situation could have become dangerous if it had not been caught in time. Leaks such as that at Milner Dam could lead to a "progressive failure," he said.

Don Tracy, of the federal Bureau of Reclamation in Burley, also says the dam could have been "heading toward a failure."

But Tracy says a good river channel existed downstream from the dam, and a failure would not have been as

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS -- Under the worst possible circumstances, the South Central District Health Department may have to deal with an $80,300 deficit in its 1984 fiscal-year operations, according to preliminary budget projections.

The proposed 1984 budget was discussed Wednesday by the district's board of directors at their regular monthly meeting.

The bad news concerned state funding to the district. Gerald Hurst, the district director, projected the worst — a possible 26 percent reduction in state funds, compared to fiscal 1983.

Hurst said the estimate was based on early reports from the Legislature, but after talking with legislators this week, he believes the district probably will receive the same amount of money as this year.

So, the projected deficit would be less than $80,300, Hurst said.

The district was allotted $316,000 from the state for fiscal year 1983. But there have been two cutbacks ordered by the state during this fiscal year, and that has left the district with a little over $282,000 from state sources with which to operate, he said.

Also included in the 1984 fiscal-year's budget [illegible] is a 2 percent increase in funds from each of the eight Magic Valley counties in the district. With those increases, the district would receive a total of $464,600 for the coming fiscal year from county taxes. Under the current budget, the district received $455,500.

During the past three years, the district has requested a 5 percent increase from the counties. However, it will not make that large of a request this year, because "we're not sure we could get it," Hurst said.

Board Chairman William Chancey urged each board member to sound out the county commissioners in their areas about the 2 percent increase and to report back to Hurst, who then could make budget adjustments based on their input.

Hurst also is projecting a 9 percent decrease in revenue from contracts awarded to the district by various state and federal agencies to perform health-related services. He made that estimate based on the number of contracts the district presently is signing. The contract income for 1983 has been projected at $366,500, while the 1984 projection is $337,200.

There was some good news. Hurst estimates that [illegible] services, to be raised 3 percent over this year's figures, would increase revenue from $93,500 this year to $96,700 for 1984. These services include inspection of sewer systems for new residences.

The total estimated income for the district is $1.17 million for the coming fiscal year. That is 5 percent lower than the department's $1.23 million budget for this year.

Projected expenditures for 1984, however, amount to $1.25 million, resulting in the estimated $80,300 deficit for 1984.

There already was an $80,000 deficit this year, and as a result, the district has had to cut some personnel to balance its budget.

With the expected 1984 shortage, district officials do not know where they can cut any more without endangering the district's programs, Hurst said. Staff cuts could mean loss of contracts, which adds up to a "snowballing" effect, he said.

Youth looks at government

Twin Falls Mayor Chris Talkington got a taste of life on the other side of the podium Wednesday, as he answered questions on the operation of city government from members of a local DeMolay chapter. Being a politician is an "entirely honorable" profession, Talkington said, although it is "like nothing else you have ever done before." He encouraged the boys to seek public office in the future. The DeMolays, a boys service organization, made their annual visit to City Hall on Wednesday, on the 64th anniversary of the founding of their order. After leaving City Hall, they were taken on a tour of the Police Department and other city facilities.

Truck driver electrocuted

BURLEY — A 51-year-old Idaho Falls man was electrocuted Wednesday morning while leaning against a crane that hit a power line at a Burley construction site.

The victim was identified by police as George Dias, a truck driver working for the Teton Crane Co. of Idaho Falls.

The accident took place about 11 a.m. at Park Avenue and West 27th Street, where a small bridge is being built across a canal, said Lt. Jim Higens of the Burley Police Department.

According to Higens, Dias apparently was waiting to unload some construction equipment he had delivered to the site. He was leaning against the crane, which was loading concrete blocks into the ditch. The crane hit an overhead electric wire, sending a charge through the crane and electrocuting Dias.

Burley resident Garth Koyle, who lives near the site, ran over and administered resuscitation to Dias, while waiting for an ambulance to arrive. But Dias was pronounced dead at Cassia Memorial Hospital, Higens said.

Another unidentified man standing near the crane was knocked to the ground by the electric shock, but he was not injured, Higens said. There were no other injuries.

Burglary suspects arrested

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Two Cassia County men were arrested Tuesday evening for allegedly breaking into six Burley doctors' offices.

The men also are suspected of two other Mini-Cassia burglaries, which took place last month.

Randy Shaw, 19, of Hazelton, and Robbie Sutton, 18, of Burley, currently are being held in the Cassia County Jail, in lieu of $3,000 bond each, according to Lt. Jim Higens of the Burley Police Department.

According to Higens, an unidentified Cassia Memorial Hospital employee spotted two "suspicious-looking" men on a motorcycle in the back parking lot of the hospital, near the wing containing several doctors' offices.

She then notified police, who stopped the two men several blocks from the hospital and cited them for a traffic violation.

About that time, another patrol car had been dispatched to the doctors' offices, where they found an undisclosed amount of cash had been stolen.

The two men, who were being cited for the traffic violation at the time, then were taken into custody for the burglaries, because they had been seen near the doctors' offices, Higens said.

The stolen cash was recovered from the two men, Higens said.

Police also suspect the two men of burglarizing another doctor's office in the same building on Feb. 27. Nothing was taken in that incident, Higens said.

In addition, the two are suspects in a Heyburn house burglary last month. Higens said that $1,400 worth of stolen tools that was in that break-in were recovered from the two men, but he would not elaborate.

Shaw and Sutton have been charged with the Tuesday burglaries of the doctors' offices and the Feb. 27 incident, Higens said. The men were arraigned Wednesday in Fifth District Magistrate Court.

Higens said that he expects Minidoka County also will file charges in connection with the Heyburn break-in.

The names of the doctors whose offices were burglarized were not available.

Briefly

Public hearing scheduled

TWIN FALLS — A public hearing will be held at 10 a.m. this morning on a plan to place a gravel-crushing operation in the Melon Valley.

Before the Twin Falls County commissioners is a request, submitted by Daniel Skeem, for a conditional-use permit that would allow him to operate a temporary gravel-crusher operation on his property, located adjacent to Sun Trap Ranches.

Once the gravel is extracted from the site, Skeem says he would rehabilitate the area.

Last month, the county Planning and Zoning Commission unanimously approved the request. But the decision was appealed to the county commissioners.

The hearing will be held in the commissioners' office in the Courthouse.

Filer residents injured

TWIN FALLS — Two Filer residents were treated for minor injuries following a rear-end collision Wednesday afternoon at Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Filer Avenue.

According to Twin Falls police, Donald Schroeder, 35, of Filer, and his son, Kevin, 15, were treated for possible back and neck injuries after the Schroeder vehicle was struck in the rear by a pickup truck, driven by Gary N. Nelson, 32, of Hagerman.

Nelson has been cited for inattentive driving.

Police said Schroeder was southbound on Blue Lakes Boulevard, approaching a traffic light when it turned yellow. He came to a stop but the Nelson vehicle struck his car, knocking it 50 feet through the intersection.

Buhl man arrested

GOODING — Sheriff Robert Aja of Gooding County says that an arrest has been made in connection with a burglary last December in Bliss.

According to Aja, Jay Hash, 25, of Buhl, was arrested March 5 in Las Vegas on a warrant charging him with first-degree burglary and grand theft.

He is charged with burglarizing Lenker's Grocery store in Bliss.

Hash was arraigned in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Gooding, after being returned from Nevada on March 8.

American Telephone and Telegraph Co., according to Merline Jensen, the Idaho rates and tariffs supervisor for Mountain Bell.

In a presentation preceding the testimony, Jensen told a crowd of more than 50 persons gathered at Gooding City Hall that the federally ordered divestiture of AT&T's subsidiaries will create seven regional telephone companies — one of which will be Mountain Bell. But it also will mean that the regional companies will not receive revenue from interstate long-distance calls.

That revenue, which is higher than needed for actual costs, subsidizes local service costs, which do not pay for themselves at present, he said.

Citing a host of figures to show that increased basic service rates will be needed to cover the actual costs of providing local-calling services, Jensen said "local rates will have to climb to meet costs" in order to keep Mountain Bell solvent when the divestiture plan takes effect on Jan. 1, 1984.

Because of the divestiture, then, rates will be adjusted to more accurately reflect actual costs for services. That means long-distance charges should decrease, he said, but local costs will increase.

"The company recognizes that these (proposed) basic rates are large increases," Jensen said, "but what you're seeing is our reaction to what is happening as a result of the divestiture order."

Ward told the audience that while specific provisions of the rate request may be opposed by some people, Jensen's analysis of the financial problems posed to Mountain Bell by the AT&T divestiture order "are largely accurate."

In addition, he warned the audience, "what you're seeing is only the first chapter in increases that will be coming each year for the next five years.

"You're only seeing the tip of the iceberg," concerning possible increases in costs for phone service, he said, noting for example, that the Federal Communications Commission, which regulates interstate phone services, will be ordering $2 to $4 monthly increases in access charges — charges for being hooked up to interstate calling systems — every year for the next five years.

"In many ways, Mountain Bell and the PUC are not responsible" for the situation, he said. "But this is a check we don't have to sign.

ing American Telephone and Telegraph, which calls for AT&T to be broken up into seven regional phone companies. As part of the order, AT&T no longer will be allowed to provide "terminal equipment" such as telephones, Argyle says.

Instead, beginning in 1984, the regional phone companies will be responsible for providing communications-system access lines, only. American Bell, which will become a separate subsidiary of AT&T, will assume responsibility for providing telephones.

American Bell has contracted with Sears, Radio Shack and other outlets to sell or possibly lease phones and repair them. It also will open its own phone-service centers, although it will have only one in Idaho.

The Federal Communications Commission has ordered the phone company to get rid of the phones at its present service centers. Those centers will be discontinued, as part of the largest corporate break-up in history.

The phone company can sell any phones in its inventory that existed at the end of 1982, Argyle says, but once that inventory is exhausted "the public will have to purchase their telephones elsewhere. We can't even legally tell people where to get them."

Phones that are not sold by Jan. 1, 1984, including those currently leased by customers, will become the property of American Bell. Argyle says that American Bell "may elect to continue renting phones, and they may not. That hasn't been determined.

"What the PUC is saying is that we should let these people buy their telephones now. But if they don't, they can continue to lease them, at least up to Jan. 1, 1984.

The lump-sum costs for phones between April 1 and June 30, as proposed by the PUC, would be: $15.53 for a standard rotary phone, $35.02 for a standard Touchtone, $39.95 for a Princess rotary, $49.95 for a Princess Touchtone, $44.95 for a Trimline rotary and $54.95 for a Trimline Touchtone.

serious at Milner, as it would have been at many other dams in the state.

Young says the state had inspected the dam twice in the last four years.

It was inspected on June 1, 1979, by the state and the Army Corps of Engineers. And it was inspected by the state again on April 28, 1981.

At that time, inspectors noted the dam was "generally in good condition," and that there had been "no significant change" since the last inspection, Young said Wednesday.

No one probably ever will know what caused the leak, the officials say. They all believe that rodents could have been the cause, but they also mention numerous other possibilities.

Travis says the dam will be 25 feet wider at the leak point when the repairs are completed.

He says a gravel-based clay material will be made into slurry, then poured into the eroded portions of the dam's core.

That will form a natural cement after it is left to sit overnight, he says.

The dam then will be rebuilt with existing material, and another two feet of gravel-clay mixture poured over it. A layer of rip-rap stones will be the final element of the reconstructed dam, he says.

A close watch will be kept on the dam as the refilling of the reservoir proceeds, Travis says.

BURLEY — The 1983 Mini-Cassia Home and Garden Show will be held this Friday in the Burley Inn's new convention center.

Area merchants have been invited to display the latest in yard, garden and home merchandise.

In addition, the University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service will sponsor seminars during the show. Topics will include: increasing garden productivity, preserving produce, innovative irrigation, yard and garden insect control, landscaping ideas and improving soil fertility. The seminars will be directed by experts from the Extension Service.

Seminars will begin on the hour and last 30 minutes.

The Extension Service also will have a booth available, where staff members will answer questions.

Bloodmobile visits Wendell

WENDELL — The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be in Wendell on this Friday, March 18, from 11 a.m to 3 p.m. at the American Legion Hall. The goal has been set at 110 pints, and there is a special need for type O-negative and O-positive donors.

Donors between the ages 17 to 65 will be accepted.

Leona Ambrose is chairman of the event.

CSI offers stocks course

TWIN FALLS — "Stocks and Options," a three-session non-credit course offered by the College of Southern Idaho, will start next Monday, March 21.

Twin Falls broker Zane Lindley will teach the class, which will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. on Mondays, in Room 110 of the Shields Building.

The course is an introduction to trading in stocks and options. Subjects covered will include strategies, "puts and calls," covered-option writing, buying and selling stock, and interpreting the stock market.

Farmers offer scholarships

GLENNS FERRY — Two $150 scholarships will be awarded to graduating seniors who are members of the Elmore County Farm Bureau, or whose parents are members.

The awards will be announced at the commencement exercises of the winning students' high schools.

Each scholarship is for one year only. Recipients may use the money to attend a private, public or vocational institution of higher learning in the summer or fall of 1983.

Applications for the award should be completed and submitted to the guidance counselor of a student's high school by April 15.

Marine colonel promoted

TWIN FALLS — Marine Col. Walter J. Donovan, the husband of the former Rita Allen of Twin Falls, has been promoted to brigadier general.

Donovan currently is the staff judge advocate for the First Marine Division at Camp Pendleton in California.

Donovan graduated from St. John's University in 1955 and was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps in 1956.

Among his assignments have been command of the Marine detachment aboard the U.S.S. Hornet, commanding officer of the headquarters company at the Marine Officer's Candidate School in Quantico, Va., and operations officer of the 1st Amphibious Tractor Battalion in Vietnam.

Correction

In Wednesday's Times-News, the enrollment of the Dietrich school system was reported incorrectly in an article on the proposed merger of the three Lincoln County school districts. The correct figure is 125, according to Dietrich Superintendent Wayne Perron.

Perron also said the faculty-to-student ratio quoted by Jack Durham, one of the organizers of a petition drive to consolidate the school districts, was wrong. The school district has 12 students for each teacher, he says.

Two Buhl events are 'fun-raisers, too

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Two events held last weekend in Buhl both turned out not only to be fund-raisers but also "fun-raisers."

The third annual Buhl Community International Smorgasbord grossed approximately $7,500, which will be used to purchase a public-address system for the junior-high gym.

And a 30-hour "play-a-thon," conducted by 45 Buhl junior- and senior-high band students raised more than $2,400 for more classroom equipment.

The smorgasbord, which offered an all-you-can-eat dinner "from" five different countries, drew about 2,200 diners, according to Ann Sweeney, who coordinated the event with her husband, Mike.

"Everyone was pleased with the way it went, and I'm pleased to know just what a community can do when everyone pulls together," she says.

Money from advance ticket sales still is coming in, Sweeney says, so the exact amount raised is not yet known.

After the bills have been paid for the food and other materials, the funds will be presented to the school district, she says.

Since the regulation gym at the junior high is the largest gym in the Buhl schools, it is the one most used for all-school and community activities, Sweeney says.

So, a new public-address system in that gym will serve everyone, because the present system "proved to be, the last few years, inadequate," she says.

Although the international dinner served 500 people less than last year, Sweeney says "it was still a very successful day."

The Buhl music students' play-a-thon was also a success for raising money and the spirits of the young musicians.

Even though the dedicated performers eventually "pooped out" after playing non-stop from Friday afternoon through Saturday night, their band director, David Hubbard, says they gained a "lot of respect in themselves."

Before they started their continuous concert, which was attended by more than 200 residents, Hubbard says the students "used to think they couldn't do anything right."

But as a result of the musical marathon, the band students discovered they really are good, Hubbard says.

"What they do and what they see as an outcome is always better than anyone's praise," he says.

"Part of feeling good about themselves is letting people know they're good," he says.

Unfortunately, not everyone in the neighborhood where the play-a-thon was conducted appreciated the music.

A few even turned out to be music critics, so the band students moved from the senior-citizen center in downtown Buhl to the high school gym at midnight on Friday.

But the critics didn't bother the Buhl students by Saturday night, Hubbard says, the musicians still were giving "it their all."

"You couldn't even tell they had sore chops," he says.

Hubbard is happy with the money that was raised by the play-a-thon. With $1,000 in pledges from 72 local businesses and the remaining pledges from the families and friends of the students, "we met our goal for what we need to do next year," he says.

Since the musical marathon worked out so well, Hubbard says he hopes to make it an annual event.

Next year, he says he may even see if he can combine it with the Buhl Community International Smorgasbord, "because we will have a built-in audience."

Hagerman man finds only 'sandy' support

Chamber chief wants to build beach

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — The idea of developing a beach along a Snake River shore has been met with apathy.

Burt Holmes, the president of the Hagerman Chamber of Commerce, says there has been little response to his proposal to build a beach. A possible site for the beach, he says, is near existing docks on the river at Bell Rapids, near Hagerman.

He says most of the letters that were sent to mayors of cities within 50 miles of the beach site, requesting comments on the proposal, have not been answered. The Gooding mayor, Gene Heller, sent Holmes a negative response, calling the project a waste of money, according to Holmes. Only Bliss Mayor Rolland Zollinger said his city was interested in having a beach to use.

"It would be good for the community," he commented.

Holmes says he has arranged for free sand to cover the area north of the docks and extend four or five feet into the water. He predicted that with enough public support, the Idaho Travel Committee might grant funding for improvements, such as more trees, boom logs to restrict toddlers and lifeguard service.

With all the water in Gooding County, we don't have a single beach, which, in my mind, is crazy," Holmes says.

"I would think they would all be for it. They give up absolutely nothing.

But "at this point, it seems to be a dud," he says. "I think it is a fantastic idea."

To have it ready by summer, Holmes says that work on the beach should begin in April. Meanwhile, he plans to continue seeking support for the project.

Buhl newest police officer is approved by City Council

BUHL — Kelly Wilson, 23, the newest Buhl city police officer, started his first day on the job on Tuesday.

The Buhl resident, who was chosen out of 74 applicants, had been a member of the city's police reserve for a year.

He is currently attending the College of Southern Idaho's law-enforcement program, from which he will graduate in April.

In addition to serving in the Buhl reserves, Wilson was a campus police officer at CSI and obtained on-the-job training through the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department.

Wilson's appointment to the Buhl department was approved by City Council on Monday.

Construction problems delay opening of Jackpot motel

JACKPOT — Construction delays have pushed back the opening of the new Cactus Pete's casino motel wing in Jackpot until May.

Pat Wallace, the project manager for the construction project for Neilsen and Co. of Twin Falls, the general contractor, said Wednesday the delays are due in part to the expensive finishes called for in the interior decorating plans.

Also, it was decided only last week that some space on the ground floor will be used for a "high-end" women's boutique, he said. The boutique will be operated by Kathy Harris, the owner of Kathy's clothing store in Jerome.

Wallace said a date for a ceremony marking the grand opening of the 96-room motel will be set when one of the casino owners returns from a vacation.

However, he said part of the facility might be opened before the ceremony. But he said the entire motel will be open by Memorial Day.

Wallace said that Henry Conversano is the interior designer for the new wing. Conversano is well-known in the casino business, having designed interiors for such companies as Playboy and Harrah's, he added.

But the complexity of the finishes is making for numerous construction problems, he said.

Volunteers needed for ambulance

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

West End
Twin Falls County

BUHL — If Buhl residents want a full-time ambulance back in their community, they will have to pay for it — either with their time or their money.

Carl and Cindy Miller, who recently purchased an ambulance service in Mountain Home, are willing to extend their business to Buhl. But they need volunteers to staff an ambulance, they say.

Last month, Dennis Brodigan, the owner of Twin Falls Emergency Medical Services, said he would consider re-instating an ambulance in Buhl. But he needs at least $2,500 per month to staff two full-time employees.

"I think the challenge before you citizens is to find one or the other (time or money)," Mayor Jim Barker said at the Buhl City Council meeting Monday night.

Brodigan pulled out his one Buhl-based ambulance in February, saying he had lost more than $16,000 during the six months it was in operation there.

Ambulances still are dispatched to Buhl from Twin Falls, while the city's quick-response unit stabilizes patients for transportation to the hospital.

When Tom Edmons, a Buhl masonry contractor, learned that the city had lost its only ambulance, he found the Millers of Portland, Ore., who are interested in starting an ambulance service in Buhl.

At Monday night's meeting, Carl Miller said he wants to establish another ambulance service in Idaho, but it would require the support of the community.

"I'm not coming into Buhl to make money; I'm coming into Buhl to fill a need," Miller said.

"I think the potential is here if you really want to do it," he said.

Elmore County subsidizes his Mountain Home ambulance service, but Twin Falls County has discontinued the practice. Therefore, Miller said he would need at least $250 per month from each community using his service.

Miller said he would provide the vehicle, the equipment and the insurance.

But to keep costs down and reduce the rates to patients, Miller said the ambulance would have to be staffed by volunteer emergency medical technicians.

"With volunteers, I feel it would be financially sound enough to pay for itself," he said.

However, Ronn Jones, a volunteer firefighter and a member of the Buhl quick-response unit, told those present at Monday's meeting that although the EMTs would really like to help, there are just not enough volunteers to run a full-time ambulance.

Only about six of the 14 emergency medical technicians working with the Fire Department and the quick-response unit might be able to also work for the ambulance, Jones said.

And to properly operate a full-time professional ambulance service, which requires more time and responsibility, at least 30 volunteers would be needed, he said.

As it is now, Jones said that volunteers like himself are serving a "dual role" on both the Buhl Fire Department and the quick-response unit.

Most of the volunteers also have full-time jobs, and "I don't want to take advantage of my livelihood," he said.

Members of the quick-response unit are on call only to stabilize the patient until an ambulance arrives, he said.

But as an ambulance employee on 12-hour shifts, the volunteers would be responsible for administering advanced life support and traveling to the hospital with the patient, so

Polling begins noon Thursday

By CYNTHIA CUMMINS

Wood River

HAILEY — Blaine County residents will decide next Thursday, March 24, whether or not to finance a $900,000 property-tax override to boost the 1983-84 school district budget.

Polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m. at Hemingway Elementary School in Ketchum, at the Carey school and at the Hailey and Bellevue elementary schools.

Voters need not be registered, but they must sign an oath that they are at least 18 and have been residents of Blaine County and Idaho for at least 30 days.

Superintendent Richard Jones says that a simple majority is needed to pass the override.

He says that severe cutbacks in the state's appropriations for public schools and increased operating costs are the causes for the override request.

Jones says that based on the state formula for determining public school allocations, Blaine County's projected 1983-84 appropriation could be less than $500,000. That figure contrasts with a state allocation of $1.1 million for 1980-81.

To dramatize the school district's plight, Jones notes that in 1974-75, it cost $67,000 to heat and light the same school facilities that exist today. The cost for the 1982-83 school year is expected to be $230,000, he says.

This will be the fifth consecutive year the Blaine district has asked county residents to pay additional property taxes to help support public education, Jones says. The past four tax overrides have been successful.

Jones says that a property owner's extra tax is determined by dividing the total amount of the additional levy — approximately $900,000 in this case — by the total market value of property in the county. That percentage is then multiplied by an individual property's value to determine the additional tax on that property.

For example, the owner of a $50,000 house would pay approximately $49 more in property taxes if the override wins approval. Jones says this amount is only $19.75 more than the override tax last year on the same property.

Jones notes that the election must be held now, so that if the override passes, the Blaine County commissioners can set the extra tax levy in September. If the override does not pass, the school board must notify teachers of layoffs by April 1.

Jones says that in past years, the school district has threatened cutbacks in school programs and staff if the override did not pass.

However, he says, the district is adopting a more positive approach this year.

"Blaine County voters are well-educated about this problem now," Jones says. "This year, we're simply saying, 'We need the bucks.'"

In addition to all of Irene Lemmon's other chores, she helps out by cleaning screens at the family's fish-farm business

Gooding woman enjoys farming life

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — A farm wife is able to can 10 bushels of peaches and raise 49 bum lambs while caring for five children.

But the Gooding County Farm Wife of the Year, Irene Lemmon of Hagerman, says it's all worth it.

"I recommend farm life above any other for raising children."

Lemmon was chosen farm wife by the Gooding County Farm Bureau. She also was named District III Farm Wife in November, and she competed in the state contest during the December Idaho State Farm Bureau convention.

Judging is based on a woman's involvement in the family farm, in the Farm Bureau and in community affairs.

A native of southern Idaho, Lemmon grew up on her father's farm. "I was raised on a farm and knew what I was getting into," she says, with a warm smile. "I always knew I would be a farm wife.

"My daughter said, 'I'll never marry a farmer.' But she did."

Irene's husband, George, and their two sons and a son-in-law are involved in fish farming at Blind Canyon and Ten Springs in the Hagerman Valley.

"We've been involved in all phases of fish farming, from the egg to processing fish for market," she says.

At present, the operation involves raising quarter-pound fish to market size of about one pound. The Lemmons plan to return to the hatchery phase of fish farming sometime in the future.

"But not processing," Irene says, with a grimace. She professes no great love for boning fish.

The Lemmons also grow alfalfa seed, grain and a few cattle. They live on the same farm that George's father, Guy Henry Lemmon, acquired in 1898.

"A farm wife must be able to fill in anywhere," she says.

Irene's duties, besides the house, children, garden and raspberry patch, have included driving grain truck and "running into town for repair parts."

Home management and farm management are skills that successful farmers and their families must develop, she says.

With obvious pride, she says that her main job seems to be "running a short-order cafe. "George and I have always felt that a warm meal helps the crew work better."

Irene began cooking for farm crews as a young girl, helping her mother when the threshers came at harvest time.

This past summer, she took a hot lunch each day to the 10-man crew that was working on the family fish ponds. "The men would watch for my car to come over the hill."

The Lemmons have three daughters, two sons and 10 grandchildren.

"We expected our children to take on responsibility and to learn even beyond the farm."

All of the Lemmon children have attended college, and four earned degrees.

Both Irene and her husband have been recognized as honorary FFA chapter farmers because of their work with the Hagerman chapter of Future Farmers of America, which their sons served as chapter presidents.

Irene also served as chapter mother for the Future Homemakers of America at Hagerman while her daughters were in high school.

In addition, she has been a 4-H leader and a substitute teacher in Hagerman schools.

She also enjoys canning, decorating cakes and caring for her grandchildren.

Would she recommend being a farm wife to the young girls of today? "You bet!" she says, enthusiastically.

"I have never felt discriminated against in my home or community. I am able to talk with my husband and family, and be accepted. Farming tends to make you equal."

Plans under way for Bliss' summer centennial jubilee

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

North Side

BLISS — Plans are well under way for a grand centennial celebration this summer in Bliss.

Former city Clerk Ruby Jinkins has been organizing a three-day event, which will include the city's annual Fourth of July whitewater race, rodeo and fireworks display.

An unusual highlight will be a formal Sunday tea, made elegant with white tablecloths and silver settings. And a colossal birthday cake will be served.

"We want it as lovely as possible," Jinkins says of the tea.

The biggest centennial project is compiling and printing a history book of the city.

Jinkins says that a dozen "old-timers" — descendants of pioneer families — are contributing to the book, which will be sold at cost during the celebration. The history of the schools, grange, city government and early settlers will be detailed in the publication.

"The historical part is what the celebration is all about," Jinkins says.

At a meeting in Bliss on Monday, historian Jim Gentry, a professor at the College of Southern Idaho, discussed the details of compiling the historical data with Jinkins and others who are working on the book.

Also at the meeting was Tom Rybus of Boise, representing the Association for the Humanities in Idaho. Through Rybus, the city is trying to get a small grant -- less than $2,000 — to pay for additional historical research, photo reproduction and book publication expenses.

Jinkins describes the history of Bliss as rich and exciting, noting that the early population was more than 700.

"They even [illegible] in opera house," she says.

City Council has budgeted $1,000 for the birthday party, and additional money may be raised from merchants and residents this spring, council members say.

On May 1, a 36-foot by 35-inch heavy canvas banner will be displayed across the center street of the city to announce the centennial.

A full schedule of music is being planned, parade trophies have been ordered and students at the State School for the Deaf and Blind in Gooding are making button pins with a centennial logo.

During the three-day event, Bliss women not wearing long dresses and men not in cowboy boots and Western attire may be given a 10-cent fine.

"I think it's terrific that I live in Bliss, especially during a centennial," Jinkins says. "It's going to be great."

BLM asks public comment

By KELLY EVERITT
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The Bureau of Land Management's Burley District is seeking public comment on four widely divergent management plans that have been prepared to determine the future of 467,000 acres of BLM land in Cassia County.

The four options reflect the variety of concerns expressed by the public in a series of hearings held last year in Malta, Oakley and Burley, plus the views contained in nearly 250 letters sent to the district office.

"The public now has an opportunity to look at all of our resource management proposals in one package and to weigh the merits and drawbacks of each option before concluding what is best," Cozakos says.

The first option proposed by the district calls for the maintenance of the status quo -- the existing land-management situation. The other options emphasize:

• Managing the land to maximize mineral development, harvest of wood-land products, production of livestock forage and favoring motorized recreation.

• Protecting the land for its wildlife habitat, scenic quality, watershed quality and archaeological values.

• Balancing the competing interests of the other options "to provide a variety of uses, within the multiple-use concept and sustained yield capabilities of the public lands." That option would operate "without any predetermined management philosophy other than the protection of fragile, non-renewable resources as required by law," the plan states.

"A range of management options was required to address more than one side of several issues," Cozakos says.

"For example, one segment of the public may want more motorized recreation, another less. One wants more areas left roadless, another less."

An analysis of the comments expressed last year resulted in the compilations of those opinions into four general philosophies, which directed the planning efforts that produced the four management options, Cozakos says.

With publication of the options, the district office now wants "people to tell us which, if any, of the management options for the public lands is adequate.

"We need to know their specific likes and dislikes about each of the four land-use options," he says. "We want to know if people feel their concerns have been included in one or more of the options."

In effect, Cozakos says, after all the hearings that were held last year, presentation of the four proposals now gives "people another chance to help shape how the public land and resources in Cassia County should be managed."

Although public comment is not required at this stage of the planning process, it is being sought anyway, as an added opportunity for the public to provide continuing direction to the district's planning efforts, a member of Cozakos's staff says.

Copies of the plans may be obtained at the district office in Burley. The comment period ends April 4.

After all comments are received, the district staff will "select a preferred alternative that we feel provides the greatest net good for the public land," Cozakos says.

He says that the land-use plan

Offensive odor not expected to improve golfing swing

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Converting seven acres of lawn at the new Jerome sewage-treatment plant into a small golf course may not be as simple as it sounds, according to one city employee who works at the facility.

Richard Wright, a shift supervisor for the treatment plant, told Jerome City Council members on Tuesday night that the grounds would be anything but an ideal place for a golf course.

He said that contrary to earlier reports, there would be an odor of sewage in the area, especially during hot weather, which is the peak golfing season. Wright also suggested that a safety and health hazard might be created should the public be attracted to the grounds.

Lanny Sloan, Jerome's public-works director, has proposed that seven acres of grass around the buildings at the plant be converted to a seven-hole pitch-and-putt golf course and turned over to the Jerome Recreation District for operation and maintenance.

He says that would save the city the cost of mowing the large lawns and would give the community a needed recreation facility.

In listing his objections, Wright said effluent from the plant is used to irrigate the lawns. Opening the lawns to public use would expose people to that water, which contains hazardous bacteria, he said.

"The result would be that the health department would require us to upgrade our treatment to reduce the coliform bacteria (level) to about one-50th of the present limit. That would mean increasing the chlorine treatment, and we could no longer use the water to irrigate the grass. It would kill the grass," he said.

Other objections raised by Wright included the high cost of chlorine; the fact that adults and children would have access to valves controlling the sewage treatment and potential problems with vandalism.

He said that in addition to those problems, there is the question of safety when the public is allowed on the grounds, where the digesters and storage tanks are located.

"I would sure hate to have to fish a kid out of one of the digesters. We have one million gallons of open fluid at that plant," he said.

The problem of golf balls going into the digesters and sludge beds, and causing damage to pumps and other equipment was another argument he offered against the plan.

In addition, he said, at some not too distant date, it may be necessary to increase the sludge beds to accommodate the city's increasing sewage output. That would eliminate parts of the golf course, he said.

Ambulance

that job would be much more involved, he said.

Buhl Police Chief Dave Hartway said several members of the police force are also trained as EMTs because they are usually first on the scene of an accident.

But with their present rotating shifts, Hartway said, "I don't think they'll be able to put in any more hours than they already are."

Since finding volunteers seemed to be the greatest obstacle to bringing Miller's ambulance service to Buhl, the mayor said the community had three alternatives.

The city could re-hire Brodigan, stick with the quick-response unit as the first emergency vehicle or find volunteers for the low-cost service.

"But I don't mean six people or eight people or 10 people. I mean a whole bunch of people," he said.

Jones said he was glad that council understood the volunteers' situation. "You feel bad, you want to help, but you have responsibilities," he said.

"We just flat don't have the personnel," said Councilman Terry Lechner. "We're interested, but there isn't a great deal we can do about it" because the city cannot force volunteers to work, he said.

Lechner proposed that the west end of Twin Falls consider establishing an ambulance taxing district to pay for the service.

The vote for a tax district would prove if the public really is interested in having an ambulance, the mayor said.

After the meeting, Edmons, who is spearheading a drive to bring an ambulance service to Buhl, said he will be speaking with his attorney about acting on council's suggestion to establish an ambulance taxing district.

In the meantime, Edmons said he already has spoken to many local businessmen who are willing to donate money to the city if it is applied to an ambulance service.

Edmons also will be searching for volunteers to staff an ambulance.

"We have got the support of the community," he said. "But we have got to work together.

"At least I introduced them to another service that wouldn't cost an arm and a leg," he said.

Edmons said it does not matter to him which ambulance service operates in Buhl. "My main concern is to get an ambulance down here for the community.

"We'll go whatever route we have to go to get an ambulance service," he said.

BLM

eventually chosen "could be one of the preliminary alternatives, a combination of parts from several of the preliminary alternatives, or one of the alternatives modified in response to the public comment we're seeking."

After an alternative is selected, and probably modified, the district staff will prepare a final land-use plan and a draft environmental impact statement for public comment. The final plan, which should be available by the end of this year, could be further modified as a result of public hearings that will be held at that time.

Cozakos says the environmental impact statement will be the first prepared by the BLM in Idaho. In the past, impact statements have focused on single-resource actions, such as livestock grazing or wilderness studies.

Hazelton Butte farmers join forces to battle soil erosion

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

HAZELTON -- Since farmers first settled the Hazelton Butte area in the east end of Jerome County, spring run-off and irrigation waters have been washing away their rich topsoil.

On some of the lands, farmers are now seeing bedrock and "pan" soils coming to the surface, and fields that once produced top-quality crops are threatened. Conservationists say no amount of fertilizer will make the fields produce once the topsoil is eroded.

But with the assistance of the federal Soil Conservation Service and other agricultural agencies, the farmers are taking steps to turn the conditions around.

A year ago, the Hazelton Butte watershed project was granted a $1 million appropriation through the Soil Conservation Service, with assistance from the federal Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service.

To stay within the available funds, an area of 14,000 acres and some 47 farms was set up, in which to implement conservation practices. And participating farmers, over a three- to 10-year period, will match the federal funds on either a 50 percent or 25 percent basis, making the project a $1.5 million to $2 million undertaking.

District conservationist Carrol Tyler, of the Jerome SCS office, says that improvements that benefit individual farmers will be matched by 50 percent federal money. Those that benefit the overall project area will receive a 75 percent matching grant.

"We have farmers who even have offered to pay 100 percent of the costs on their farms, so that farmers at the higher elevations could have more money and encouragement to take corrective measures," Tyler says. "Of course, we can't do this, but it shows the concern of the participating farmers."

Farms located on the lower levels of the butte suffer the most since their fields are not only eroded by their own irrigation waters and run-off, but are washed by uncontrolled water that leaves the farms at the higher elevations. Tyler says the SCS is especially anxious to get farmers on the higher elevations of the butte involved in anti-erosion practices.

The North Side Soil Conservation District, whose members instigated the project in 1978, sponsored a tour of the area Wednesday. And several persons who had participated in earlier tours of the area, noted that much improvement could be seen this year.

"It takes about a thousand years to make an inch of topsoil, and we can see here where several inches have washed away in a matter of a day or two," James Travis, conservationist, said.

Larry Huettig, one of the 47 farmers involved in the project, said most of the first year's accomplishments involve "chiseling" or "subsoiling" the farmland. These practices call for cutting through the soil at a depth of 14 to 24 inches. This aerates the soil and allows it to absorb more of the run-off water and slows the velocity of the run-off.

Fields that had been chiseled were dry for several inches of depth, tour members noted, while those that were untouched showed several inches of mud in low places.

Other practices being put into use include the construction of ponds to collect the water and settle out the topsoil; the planting of filter strips at the ends of the field to collect silt and slow run-off; and installing pipelines in low areas to carry drainage water and prevent gullies from washing through fields.

About 15 of the 47 farmers in the project area have signed contracts with the SCS to undertake erosion-control programs, with five more farmers now in the process of contracting. Tyler says the goal is to establish contracts with all of the farmers in the project area.

Without such a program, Tyler says, future generations will not be farming on the Hazelton Butte.

Jerome schools seek site for future building

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME -- Members of the Jerome school board have begun making plans for some new school facilities.

During a meeting Monday night, the board authorized Superintendent Stephenson Youngerman to begin looking for a suitable site that can be purchased for future construction of a school building.

Earlier this year, the board had submitted an offer on the Jerome Implement Co. building. But Youngerman had reported that the building's owners and the school board were unable to agree on the price, and both sides have withdrawn their offers.

Two recent efforts to gain voter approval of a bond issue that would have raised money for school construction failed. But the district's buildings still are overcrowded and becoming worse each year, and school board members want to be prepared for the future, they said.

In other action at the meeting:

• The board decided that kindergarten classes -- which were canceled a year ago because of lack of space -- will come back on a new basis.

The board authorized a summer kindergarten program, starting this year. Classes will begin June 9 and continue through Aug. 5. They will be held in the high school, which is air-conditioned and more suitable for summer use. There will be both morning and afternoon sessions.

Screening for the kindergarten program will be held March 25, 26 and 27, and it will be open to all kindergarten-age children, whether they attend public or private programs. The screening will test the child for hearing, sight and other possible problems.

• Board members approved a request from the Jerome Education Association for a meeting April 5 to begin contract negotiations. The meeting will begin at 8 p.m.

Board Chairman Nancy Churchman appointed the district's negotiation committee. It will consist of Youngerman; district treasurer Judy Schlerman; and board members Alvin Chojnacky and Ben Neff.

BLM targets two parcels in Jerome County for sale

JEROME -- Two parcels of federal land near the Snake River Canyon in Jerome County have been tagged for sale next year.

Jack Durham, a resource manager, and Joe Aitken, a real-estate officer, both of the Bureau of Land Management district office in Shoshone, met with the Jerome County commissioners on Monday to explain the sale plans.

"We plan to offer the two 40-acre parcels for sale in 1984, and we need some evidence that you people concur with us in the proposal," Durham told the commissioners.

He and Aitken explained that the two adjoining parcels are located just north of Idaho 79 and west of U.S. 93. Aitken said the parcels are in the same general area as the Thorn Creek exchange site, and they are relatively valuable land.

Durham said the BLM is proposing a district-wide plan for land sales for the coming year, but the two small parcels will be the only land sold in Jerome County.

Valley gets computer lesson

EDEN — Valley School District board members have received a first-hand view of what the district's computer programs are accomplishing.

Students and computer equipment came to the Monday night school board meeting to demonstrate the program, which was introduced this year. Six students gave the demonstration under the direction of teachers Dan Sellers and Jerry Michener.

Board members observed high school students doing basic programing procedures and grade-school children using computers to help them in reading, spelling and math work.

Also at Monday's meeting, board members were told that many of the recommendations made by the state Commission on Excellence in Education will go into effect in the Valley district next year. The committee, which studied educational standards in Idaho public schools, recommended increased high-school graduation requirements.

Superintendent Arlyn Bodily said while 1988 is the date for implementing most of the recommendations, Valley will be implementing a gradual increase in graduation-credit requirements, from 42 to 46.

By revising the school's curriculum and required subjects, the class of 1988 will have an opportunity to begin immediately building up the credits they will need when they graduate, he said.

Also at the meeting, a delegation of parents met with the board to ask that the wrestling program be re-instated. High School Principal Dale Tilley said the board made no promise for immediate action, but he said that if a coach is available in the district in the future, it may be possible to re-instate the sport.

The board voted to drop wrestling last month because of a lack of interest and costs, since the present coach must travel from the Minidoka School District.

It also was announced three teachers will retire from the district this year. These are: Mrs. Enid McCauley, the high-school librarian; Mrs. Virginia Kenner, a seventh-grade teacher; and Iverne Abercrombie, a fifth-grade teacher.

Shoshone plans for 'talks'

SHOSHONE — Items for contract negotiations have been presented by the Shoshone Education Association.

In accordance with the district's procedural agreements, she presented a letter outlining proposed items for negotiation, including salaries, fringe benefits and teacher in-service training.

The specific proposals and dollar amounts were not included in the initial notice of intent to negotiate.

Haffner said that the teachers will wait until the Legislature completes its funding of public schools before presenting any specific proposals.

In other action at the meeting:

• The contract for Superintendent Kenneth Crothers, who also serves as the elementary school principal, and high school Principal Keith Trappett were renewed.

• Following a review of teacher evaluations, the board approved renewing contracts with all the district's "continuing" teachers. Continuing teachers are those who have taught in the district at least four years.

Dietrich approves senior trip

Tentative travel plans include a visit to San Francisco, Los Angeles and Las Vegas. The group, to be accompanied by Rob Gaston and Char Greenfield as chaperons, will leave April 1.

A school district official said that money for the annual senior trip is earned by the students. "They start earning the money in junior high school," she said.

Wendell OKs sex-ed class

WENDELL — School-board business in Wendell was carried out quickly, with little or no discussion Monday, even though about 30 parents and students attended the meeting.

High school Principal Charles Meyer reported that 68 of 85 eighth-grade students had returned written parental approval of a proposed sex-education class.

The board promptly voted unanimously to allow the class, which will be presented by the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Next, the resignations of coaches Yogi Behrens and Frank Stevens were accepted without comment.

Behrens, the athletic director and head coach of varsity basketball and track, has been at Wendell High School for 21 years. Stevens has been head varsity football coach for three years.

In other business, Marilyn Pope asked about the progress of the second-grade class of Warren Taylor, a teacher who has been ill since October. Elementary school Principal Robert Kesler said the class is no longer behind, thanks to Sue Kearley, a first-grade teacher who successfully has taken over Taylor's large class.

Legislators delay Hagerman

HAGERMAN — The Hagerman school board took little action Monday because its financial decisions must wait until the state Legislature decides how much money the school will have.

"Really, what we've done is postpone the board meeting," said Superintendent Ken Black, explaining that another meeting will be held March 28. "They haven't decided anything at the Legislature, so we're just spinning our wheels."

At the next meeting, tenure teachers will be rehired and work will begin on the 1983-84 budget, Black said.

In other business Monday, the board granted permission for the senior class to take a trip to Lagune, near Salt Lake City, Utah.

After residents protest

Hailey may move water tank

HAILEY — A plan to move the proposed site of a city-owned 1-million-gallon water storage tank will come up for consideration at a March 24 meeting of Hailey City Council.

Council discussed the plan during its regular meeting Monday.

"We had met with the property owners (in the Indian Creek subdivision) who are affected by the project, and we thought they understood it," Hailey Mayor Wordell Rainey said. "But when we were getting down to the final paperwork, we ran into a pretty strong protest."

Originally, the storage tank would have been located on federal Bureau of Land Management land, against a hillside on the edge of the valley through which Indian Creek flows.

The project, which will be financed by a $490,000 bond issue — approved by the voters last fall — is designed to improve the water supply for Hailey, providing for future growth and guaranteeing adequate flow in the event of a major fire.

The project also calls for construction of an electric generator, which would take advantage of the potential energy created by water flowing into and from the tank. The city will sell the electricity from the plant to Idaho Power, which is expected to earn Hailey $32,000 to $34,000 a year. That revenue will be used to help repay the bonds.

Property owners in the area have offered land in the floor of the valley for construction of the storage tank, instead of on the BLM land, "so we checked into it and the engineers said it was feasible," Rainey said.

He indicated that council would be willing to move the site "if all the necessary conditions can be met."

Rainey said that in exchange for the land, the property owners wanted six fire hydrants installed in the subdivision to provide water for the rural fire department, and a guarantee that there would be a water flow of 1.5 cubic feet per second through Indian Creek during the non-irrigation season.

The cost of laying water lines for the fire hydrants would be borne by the property owners, Rainey said. He also noted that while moving the storage tank site would involve "slightly more excavation, the cost differential is minimal."

He said council will meet during its March 24 meeting with the property owners, the area's watermaster and representatives of the state Department of Water Resources to try and resolve the problems and set up the necessary legal language to ensure the 1.5 cubic-feet-per-second flow. The meeting will be held at City Hall at 8 p.m.

Rainey said council also met with representatives of Sun Valley Cable during its Monday meeting. The cable company has requested a 10 percent rate increase, "which council is looking at very closely to see if it is needed."

The mayor said council members have requested the cable firm provide additional information regarding its costs.

Sun Valley Cable wants to increase its basic fee from $10 to $11 a month, and make several minor adjustments in the fees it charges for various hook-up services, Rainey said.

He said cable representatives have been invited to the March 24 meeting to continue the discussion on the proposal.

Lincoln County starts house-numbering plan

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-New correspondent

SHOSHONE — The rural road-numbering and -addressing system is set to get under way in Lincoln County.

At Monday's meeting, the county commissioners passed a resolution requiring all unincorporated land in the county to be mapped on a grid. The resolution also requires all county residents to allow the placement of numbering plaques on their property.

The resolution provides a penalty for any resident who refuses or fails to post the address numbers.

The Nampa firm bid $5,328 to develop a system establishing addresses in the county.

Three other firms also bid on the contract.

An agreement was signed with Mountain Bell, which has agreed to pay $5 per rural customer to help pay the cost of implementing the system. Mountain Bell also will provide the numbering plaques to homeowners.

County Clerk Linda Stevenson said according to the 1980 census, there are 592 households in the county.

The program will get under way April 1, with the mapping and placement of the house numbers scheduled for completion by Oct. 1.

Local highway districts have agreed to install road names or number sign posts at intersections throughout the county.

The commissioners said the basic purpose of the addressing program is to facilitate emergency-vehicle response in rural areas. Utility companies operating in the county also will be able to provide improved service with the uniform addresses, they said.

According to Bill House of Mountain Bell, who has been working to get the system in place in both Lincoln and Blaine counties, the U.S. Postal Service also will use the new addresses for rural delivery.

House said he was "very pleased" with the commission's decision to go ahead with the program. "It will benefit all the citizens of Lincoln County."

In other business, commission dismissed the county weed supervisor, Ed Porter.

Porter has accepted full-time employment outside the county.

The commissioners had asked for his resignation two weeks ago but he refused, offering to work on weed control on weekends and during the evening hours. However, the commissioners felt Porter would not be available enough to offer sufficient service to county residents.

Cassia County will get 'tough' on dog owners

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Cassia County officials are attempting to put a leash on some dog problems in the county with a stiffer enforcement procedure.

The new effort was launched this week, partly because of several complaints from residents of the Star's Ferry area, which is located about four miles west of Burley, said Sheriff Ray Mitchell.

If loose-running dogs are bothering people or property, county residents now can fill out a notice of complaint, Mitchell says. The notice will contain a description of the dog and the person's allegations. Then, a copy of the notice will be sent to the animal's owner.

The notice will serve as a warning to the owner that if there is a similar complaint about the dog within a one-year period, the county will file a criminal complaint against the owner. The complaint will charge violation of a state law pertaining to dogs running at large, Mitchell says.

Violation of the law is a misdemeanor. In addition, dog owners will be liable for any damages caused by [illegible]

There is no county ordinance to deal with the complaints, the sheriff says, only a "meager" dog-licensing resolution. But it has not been enforceable because the county does not have a dogcatcher. Besides, few county residents bought tags for their pets anyway, the sheriff says.

The new enforcement procedure, Mitchell says, has "teeth."

The county notices should be ready by the end of this week, the sheriff says.

During the past year, his office has received many complaints about destructive dogs from Star's Ferry residents, Mitchell says. Some of the residents also complained to the county commissioners at their regular meeting this Monday.

There always have been problems in the county with dogs biting children, attacking livestock, tramping gardens and dumping over trash cans, Mitchell says. And although the Star's Ferry area is not the largest rural residential section in the county, it seems to have more than its share of troubles.

The dog problems seem to involve larger canines, not smaller house dogs, Mitchell says. Also, he says, it is not known if the animals causing the [illegible] belong to persons living within the 100-family area.

Eden folks who don't pay water bills will go thirsty

EDEN — Water users in Eden who are delinquent in their payments may be without water if they fail to heed the upcoming billings.

City Council members agreed Monday night that unless the delinquent payments are made, city crews will shut off water to the homes.

City Clerk Edith Ult said the billings that are now being prepared will be due when they reach the residents. The individuals then will have 15 days in which to make their payments, or face having no water.

Also at Monday's meeting, council voted to allocate $800 to the summer recreation program, after recreation director Ron Cline appeared and outlined plans for the summer baseball program for boys and girls.

The recreation program is sponsored by the city and the Valley School District.

Cash wedding gifts okayed

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I've written to you three times in my life — so far — and two of my letters have appeared in your column. Not bad! Here goes again.

Re money gifts at weddings: Why not? So many young people live together for a while before they tie the knot and really don't need any more serving pieces, toasters or blenders.

We gave both of our nephews money for wedding gifts. One of them pooled all his cash gifts and used it for something he really needed — a sizable down payment on a car.

I think the "correct" thing to do in every situation is what is sensible and practical for the people involved.

Any gift given with love and consideration for the recipients is "correct" in my book. Who cares what the etiquette books say!

— T.J.F. IN AGAWAM, MASS.

DEAR T.J.F.: I agree. But the etiquette books say that cash gifts ARE "correct." What is incorrect is a wedding invitation accompanied by the suggestion that a gift of cash is preferred. In other words, it's OK to GIVE cash, but it's not OK to ASK for it.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are having a knock-down, drag-out fight about a point of etiquette.

Here's the situation: My husband and I were dinner guests at the home of a couple in another city. On returning home the following day, we sent the hostess an exceptionally lovely arrangement of flowers to express our appreciation.

It's been two months, and we've heard nothing from the hostess to indicate that our flowers were received. (Never mind a "thank-you.") My husband maintains that our flowers were a "thank-you" for the dinner, and it's not necessary for her to thank us for having thanked her.

I say the hostess should have at least let us know our flowers were received. Who's right?

— PEA PICKER'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: You are. The hostess should have acknowledged the flowers and thanked you for them.

DEAR ABBY: Your column featuring the questionnaire to determine whether you are an alcoholic brought tears to my eyes.

I remember taking that test a year ago at my second A.A. meeting. The results convinced me that I was an alcoholic and had to do something about it.

When I was 17, I found myself drinking Coffee Royals at 8:30 a.m. to face my day. I had been drinking and drugging since I was 12. I was a basket case.

I am 18 now, and I have not had a drink, or drugs of any kind, for nearly a year. Tomorrow will be my first anniversary!

Alcoholics Anonymous has definitely saved my life. I have everything going for me. I came from a life of hell, and today I have a hell of a life!

Thanks for constantly plugging A.A. That column made my day.

— BOBBY S.

DEAR BOBBY: No thanks due me. A.A. threw you a lifeline. You caught it. Congratulations.

DEAR ABBY: In your column in the Toronto Sun, someone raised the old chestnut about whether a man should remove his hat in an elevator when there are ladies present.

I thought that was settled once and for all years ago by Emily Post — but I won't swear to it. This is the essence of her reply, though not the exact wording:

"An elevator is a means of transportation, in the same category as a local bus, subway, train or streetcar. The only difference is that an elevator travels vertically, rather than horizontally. A man does not remove his hat in other vehicles, so there is no necessity for him to remove it in an elevator."

You're welcome.

— ARTHUR PICKERING, CANADA

Pilot trainees can become sick, too

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am taking flying lessons and want to be a fighter pilot some day. My problem is motion sickness. The second time I flew in an airplane, I was with a pilot who gave me some positive and negative G's and got me airsick.

Since then I have had a problem with motion sickness. Maybe it's psychological. If I'm going to be a fighter pilot, I'll have to get used to the G loads involved in flying jet fighters. I'd like to know if there are any special exercises or diets that would help me get immune to motion sickness.

DEAR READER — Probably easing into pilot training at the start, rather than being exposed to too many aerial maneuvers, helps prevent the onset of motion sickness in flight.

You will be pleased to know that studies show that 80 to 90 percent of pilot trainees who experience air sickness at the onset of pilot training adapt to flight stress and eventually experience only mild symptoms — if any — during flight.

That is why pilot trainees are not washed out of training when they have air sickness. During World War II about 10 percent of pilot trainees had air sickness in the early flights. But more than half of the other air crew (not pilot trainees) had air sickness. As many as 70 percent of airborne infantry personnel were airsick.

All of this means it is fairly common to have air sickness until you get used to the increased stimuli to the balance canals in your ears. There is no special diet that will help, except not eating before flight if you tend to vomit.

Fixing your attention on something, such as the instrument panel, seems to help. Ballet dancers fix on a point to help control a similar problem.

Motion sickness is only one aspect of dizziness and vertigo, which is a common complaint. You will get the broad picture from The Health Letter 9-10, Dizziness and Vertigo, which I am sending you. Others can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 17-year-old girl and I have very flat buttocks. I've tried exercises and they don't seem to work for me. I have also tried a girdle with a false buttocks but it just doesn't look natural.

I would like to know if there is any operation or something that I can do to correct this problem.

DEAR READER — Your letter reminds me that one person's problem is another person's goal. I wish you could read the volume of mail I get from women who are concerned because they have more buttocks than they want.

Although how fat or skinny you are does have an effect on how much fat is on the buttocks, hereditary factors are also very important. The Hottentots of southern Africa have a racial characteristic of a large pillow of fat over the buttocks.

Exercises won't increase your fat stores there. If you gained fat overall you would probably increase the size of your buttocks, but that might not be attractive. And I doubt any reputable surgeon would want to do fat tissue transplants for you. Why not realize that, to many, flat buttocks are desirable, not a handicap.

Older moms beware

Erma Bombeck
At wit's end

Mothers are getting older in this country . . . even before they have the baby.

Some recent figures show that while teenagers are having fewer babies, the birthrate for women over 35 is increasing and will probably be up 46 percent during this decade.

I know, it probably sounds like a lot of fun having a baby who will sit around and connect liver spots on Mommy's arms, but in reality, there are a lot of problems older mothers haven't even considered.

For example, just when the baby is outgrowing his need for naps, you'll [illegible] into them. When his teeth start growing in, yours will start coming out.

I've always felt there are two things a woman should never do after the age of 35: stand in a natural light and have a child who is learning how to play the trumpet. The aging process is not helped by a child who is learning how to play the trumpet.

Probably the worst adjustment will be when the babies grow into teenagers. For example, if a mother has a child at the age of 35, her son will begin to drive at age 16, making her 51 years old. Anyone knows this is too late for patience and too early to die. I have seen younger mothers carried comatose, their bodies rigid, their eyes glazed, from the passenger side of the car even before they left the driveway.

Probably the No. 1 complaint of mothers everywhere is exhaustion. Ask yourself how you will feel when you are going to bed when your teenager is going out and getting up when he is coming in.

I had children ran[illegible] him by saying they crayoned on my Social Security check or took my electrocardiogram for Show and Tell, but there were times when communication between us was a glacier period apart.

It has thrown the entire traditional timetable off schedule. I will be the oldest grandmother in North America, if indeed I live to become one at all. There is no doubt in my mind I will race my grandchild for the baby food.

In Biblical and in Literary Classic times, mothers were 13 or 14 years old. Why? One can only speculate. The kids whined, "There's nothing to do," until their mother gave them something. They wanted to have children before it interfered with puberty. If they set an example, they could have an empty nest by the time they were 28.

I know. It's a great temptation to have a baby covered by Medicare, but if it were up to me, I'd resist it.

Emotionally troubled helped

ASHLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Paul, a 36-year-old college student, says that after after 20 years of alcohol and drug addiction, suicide attempts and hospitals, he now has control of himself, thanks to "EA" — Emotions Anonymous.

Paul says he used to be a "terribly, terribly angry" young man who "couldn't deal with life without chemicals." He used to make his living selling drugs, like heroin, upon which he was addicted. He used to drink a fifth of whiskey and three to four sixpacks of beer a day.

Today Paul, a recovered drug addict and alcoholic, fights hard to maintain an emotional equilibrium, and he sometimes must struggle against the recurring temptations of his old ways.

But he is happy, healthy and productive, and the temptations he faces are no longer "obsessions." Paul, like thousands of others in the United States and abroad, sought help from Emotions Anonymous.

The private non-profit organization is patterned after the Alcoholics Anonymous program, which Paul used successfully against his drinking habit.

Paul helped start the Ashland chapter of EA. About ten members meet once a week at a hospital conference room. They talk to, confide in and advise each other. There are no professional counselors associated with the support group.

Emotions Anonymous, which officials say is open to "anyone who wants to be well emotionally," has been helping people whose emotions get in the way of their lives for 15 years.

People who go to EA meetings include "parents who have problems with their kids, people who have living problems, people with phobias, people labeled with certain labels like schizophrenic, manic depressive or whatever," said one of the four salaried staffers at EA's international headquarters in St. Paul, Minn.

"I don't think there's a typical member. Some of the people have had extensive psychiatric histories, some are just not as happy as they would like to be, and many, many others fall somewhere in between," said Irene, who like other members, asked that her name not be printed.

Irene, a 30-year-old married woman with three children, suffered from severe depression, which on occasions had caused her to be hospitalized. She has not seen the inside of a hospital during her 12 years with EA.

Irene said EA's success stories include "a woman who was agoraphobic (fearful of open places), had all kinds of fears, nameless fears. She was afraid to go out of the house, to fly, to drive, to do anything. She panicked all the time and seemed unable to do anything."

After more than a dozen years with EA, the woman "is no longer fearful and can do all the things she couldn't do before," Irene said.

EA borrows Alcoholics Anonymous' "12-step program" for the basis of each chapter's weekly meetings.

The program, designed as a sort of guide to living, encourages people to take responsibility for their own actions, to admit to themselves that their lives have become unmanageable and to turn to, in the words of the group's literature, a "power greater than ourselves" for help.

Many members who laud the program's success attribute their own progress to establishing "a spiritual relationship" with that higher power. Although "God" is mentioned several times in the brief outline of the 12-step plan, members stress that the spiritual connection varies widely from member to member, and not all choose to view EA in religious terms.

EA members say it is important for them, especially when they are new members, to discover other people with similar problems to whom they can turn for support and advice.

"I had had emotional problems all my life, and when I was 24, I had my first bad spell of depression. And I was very frightened — I didn't know what was happening," Irene said.

"I felt different, like nobody felt like I did. It was a real comfort to find out that 'I am not alone,' and that other people who were ill had gotten well through the program."

Paul said, "The support experience of talking to people who had the same problems as you and have recovered is different than talking to someone who is trying to be helpful but doesn't understand."

Paul thinks that along with government cutbacks of social services, new chapters will continue to be added to the existing 800 in the United States, Canada, Germany, England, Spain and Australia.

"Unless you're rich, you can't afford a hospital or a psychiatrist," he said.

Declo junior awarded Japanese scholarship

WASHINGTON — Mark Hanzel of Burley is one of two Idaho high school student winners in the Japan-U. S. Senate scholarship program.

An announcement from the offices of Idaho Sen. James A. McClure and Sen. Steve Symms said Hanzel and Sara Martin of Moscow will join a group of similarly appointed youths representing each state in spending two months this summer as guests of Japanese families.

Hanzel, the son of Marie Hanzel of Burley, is a junior at Declo High School. Martin, a junior at Moscow High School, is the daughter of Neil and Jan Martin of Moscow.

The scholarships, provided by the Japanese government and administered by Youth for Understanding, an international student exchange organization, were initiated last year by Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki during a visit at the U.S. Capital.

Nominations for the Idaho scholarship appointments were sought from high school juniors with outstanding academic and leadership records from throughout Idaho, the senators said. Twelve semi-finalists were interviewed in Boise earlier this year by a five-member state selection committee composed of representatives of the National Association for Secondary School Principals, the National Council for Social Studies, Youth for Understanding and appointees representing each of the two senators. Members included Edward Arndt of Twin Falls.

The scholarship winners will go to Washington, D. C. in June to meet with their senators and the Japanese ambassador, after which they will receive orientation and training in Japanese culture and language at Stanford University before departing for the two-month stay in Japan with their host families.

Nephew saw queen

TWIN FALLS — Not everyone has a relative whose name dropping comments can include, "when I had lunch with the queen —."

Rulon Schwendiman, a former Twin Falls mayor, said he received a letter from his nephew, Doug Romney of Sacramento, Calif., a few days ago, discussing events in California.

The letter indicated the queen, who arrived in California during the severe rain storms that caused heavy coastal damage, took the storm in stride.

"He (Romney) commented that while at a luncheon in her honor, the queen (Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain) told him that England exported many things to the United States, but she hadn't been aware that California imported its weather from England," Schwendiman said.

Schwendiman said his nephew is a close friend and a former staff member of President Ronald Reagan, having served Reagan during the years he was governor of California. He was a guest of his former boss during events honoring the royal entourage.

ANGEL MIST DELIGHT

2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
3 cups milk
4 eggs, separated
½ cup mint jelly
¾ teaspoon mint extract
½ teaspoon green food coloring
½ cup sugar
1 cup whipping cream or 2 cups whipped topping.
1 angel food cake, 10-inch size, torn into small pieces
chocolate sauce, optional

Sprinkle gelatin over milk in sauce pan. Beat egg yolks until light and lemon-colored. Stir in milk. Stir over low heat until gelatin dissolves, about 5 minutes. Stir in jelly until melted. Remove from heat and stir in the mint extract and coloring. Chill, stirring occasionally until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon.

Beat egg whites in large bowl until soft peaks form. Gradually add the sugar and beat until stiff, but not dry. Fold whipped cream or topping into gelatin mixture. Fold in pieces of cake and meringue. Turn into 12 cup bundt pan and chill for 4 hours or overnight, until firm. Unmold and serve with chocolate sauce if desired.

Oregon State mauls Idaho 77-59 in tourney

CORVALLIS, Ore. — Idaho's Vandals collapsed in the second half Wednesday night and freshman Steve Woodside led Oregon State to a 77-59 National Invitation Tourney victory.

The Vandals, who wound up the season by losing five of their last eight, stayed with the favored Beavers and held a 35-32 lead at intermission. But Idaho opened the second half with two quick turnovers and that provided the springboard that sent Oregon State away quickly.

In the first four minutes of the half, the Beavers moved ahead 43-39 and two minutes later had stretched that to 49-41. Idaho was two-for-eight from the field with six turnovers at that point.

More NIT results on D2

But the major blowout started with the score reading 51-45. Woodside hit a free throw and then got inside for a bucket. Charlie Sitton then hit inside and from the top of the key and Woodside added another field goal to explode Oregon State into a 60-47 advantage.

Charlie Sitton, the Beavers' all-American of a year ago, picked up 13 points in the first 11 minutes of the second half, his last four points giving Oregon State its biggest lead at 64-49.

Idaho got it back down to nine at one stage but never seriously challenged after that.

In the closing seconds, the entire game collapsed into nothing and Oregon State paraded to the foul line to pad the final margin.

It marked the second straight year Oregon State has knocked the Vandals out of post-season play. The Beavers ended Idaho's hopes in the NCAA last spring. In between those loses, Idaho has defeated Oregon State twice for the Far West Classic championship.

The Vandals had a sharp first half and could have owned a big intermission lead but for the redhot shooting of Danny Evans. He hit his first five — all but one from long range — and wound up the half with eight for 10 and 16 points.

Twice in the first half Idaho held five-point leads as the Vandals held all-American Charlie Sitton to three points. But trailing 24-19, the Beavers put Sitton on the bench and put in the 6-10 Woodside. He ended the night with 18 points and hit eight straight from the field.

He immediately hit two field goals to slice the deficit to one and then added another seconds later for a 27-26 Oregon State lead. With four minutes to play, Woodside's three-point play gave the Beavers a 32-29 advantage but they couldn't score again.

Zane Frazier, Phil Hopson and Brian Kellerman — the latter from the foul line — each scored two points to give the Vandals their 35-32 halftime lead.

TWIN FALLS — Youth is a major factor in the Twin Falls boys and girls track programs.

In the first instance, there aren't enough veteran boys to make the Bruins a contender in just about any meet they'll get into this year. In the second, a good-looking group of sophomores should keep the Bruin girls in a challenging role throughout the season.

That assessment will get its first test Friday afternoon when the Bruins host Jerome, Highland and Skyline in a four-way meet at Bruin Stadium. Some field events and the 3,200-meter run will start at 2:45 p.m. with the other finals slated for 3:30.

There are bright spots among the boys — most notably senior Chris Williams who ran into the unlikely situation of running 1:57 in state last year and getting seventh.

"We don't think we'll see halfmilers like that in the state again this year — at least not that many," said Coach Jerry Kleinkopf who is termed the boys coach for payroll purposes but in reality is a co-coach with Duane Stands who is listed as the girls coach.

"But depth will be a problem unless the sophomores come on," Kleinkopf continued. "It is conceivable that we will not have a senior running on a relay team this year."

"I don't think we'll really have an idea until mid-season because we are so young. Like this upcoming meet, I don't know if we can beat a Skyline relay and I think Jerome and Highland will win all of those between them."

Going down the roster, Kleinkopf said junior Eric Watson, ill most of the spring and limited to maybe one event Friday and sophomore Gilbert Torres appear the 100 through 400-meter top candidates.

Williams will double in the 800 and 1,600 with sophomore Terry Molyneux in the shorter event. In the longer distances, Steve Summers and Rod Uribe, both state cross country placers, head up a crew of "31 boys and girls who are running distances."

In the field events, Scot Scherer is a 13-foot vaulter while junior Andy Toolson, coming back off a year's layoff, and Brent Standing will compete in the high jump. D.W. Lindsey and Brad Kittridge show promise in the discus and Kittridge will work with the shot.

The girl returnees are headed by senior Sally Butts, who has won the state 100 and 200 championships each of the past two years. Butts will be tested in the quarter, at least early in the year. And senior Macie Miller will be turned loose as often as possible.

"All her indoor times were better than last year and in time trials last week she ran what she did in the first meet a year ago, so we think she's a little faster. And she has such strength and is such a competitor we think Sally can have a really outstanding senior year," Kleinkopf said.

The sprint scene is bolstered by sophomores Mail.in Miller and Christy Sherburne, both of whom have run the 200 in 26.

Kim Hannah and Lisa Pfliiger lead the halfmile contingent currently while Nancy McGinnis and Teesie Szubert take the longer runs.

Miller is the returning queen of the field event people, although she will be the main Bruin hope in the high hurdles as well. She is the defending state long jump champion and is joined there by senior Ashley Bisplinghoff in the high hurdles. Sophomores Mail.in Miller, Macie's sister, and Jennifer Hovey will go in both hurdles.

Macie Miller, who will miss Friday's meet due to participation in the state gymnastics finals, will try the high jump this spring along with Tracy Pfarr.

In long jumping, Mail.in will join Macie and Bisplinghoff.

Twin Falls' girls have lost the state title by a couple of points the past two years after a long reign at the top. Kleinkopf sees the girls performing to that capability again -- provided injuries stay away from Butts and Macie Miller.

"I think were are a little deeper than we were last year," said Kleinkopf who wasn't able to mount much in the way of relay strength. "If the sophomores perform to their capabilities, that is."

Boise basks in cage spotlight for 3 days

By United Press International

Boise, Idaho, the headquarters for the seldom publicized Big Sky Conference, is one site of the NCAA West sub regionals. Two games will be played there Thursday night in the first round, with the second round slated for Saturday afternoon.

"I would say it's the biggest sporting event that's ever happened in Boise, to have this type of a field play here," said Ron Stephenson, commissioner of the Big Sky Conference.

Fans, businessmen and university officials are still beaming that Boise has landed highly-ranked powers such as No. 4 Virginia, featuring three-time Player of the Year Ralph Sampson, and 10-time national champion UCLA.

Sampson and top-seeded Virginia will be in the stands Thursday night, watching Washington State play Weber State in the opening round. The Cavaliers, 27-4, meet the winner in Saturday's first game. In Thursday night's other game, Utah plays Illinois, with the victor advancing to a Saturday date against the West's No. 2 seed, seventh-ranked UCLA.

Neither of the four teams playing in Boise Thursday night have a center to compete with Sampson, a mobile 7-foot-4 All-America.

Illinois, 21-10, features an honorable mention All-America in 6-4 guard Derek Harper (16 points), but the Fighting Illini's big men — 6-10 senior Bryan Leonard and 6-8 sophomore George Montgomery -- combine to average only eight points and 10 rebounds.

Utah, 16-13, has a 7-footer in senior David Cecil, but he plays behind 6-8 Chris Winans and may not see any action. The top Utes are Pace Mannion and Peter Williams, both 6-7 and each averaging 14 points per game.

Washington State, 22-6, has built its offense around Steve Harriel and Craig Ehlo, both 6-6, and 6-3 Chris Winkler. Harriel is the Cougars' leader, averaging 16 points and six rebounds.

Weber State, 23-7, has 6-10 center Tom Heywood, who had solid games in the Big Sky Conference tournament, averaging in double figures in both scoring and rebounding. But, overall, Heywood's statistics are only 10 points and seven rebounds. The top Wildcat has been forward Randy Worster, averaging 13 points per game.

"It think it's the best subregional in the country," Stephenson said. "You've got two of the most prestigious teams, and you have three more teams which have to be considered locals. Everybody around here who ever even thought they liked basketball will be trying to get in here."

Elsewhere Thursday, West Virginia, 23-7, faces James Madison, 19-10, in the first round of the East Regional at Greensboro, N.C., followed by Virginia Commonwealth, 23-6, vs. LaSalle, 18-13; Purdue, 20-8, meets Robert Morris, 23-7, followed by No. 18 Illinois State, 24-6, against Ohio U., 22-8, in the opening round of the Mideast Regional at Tampa, Fla.; and Maryland, 19-9, faces No. 16 Tennessee-Chattanooga, 26-3, in the first round of the Midwest Regional at Houston, followed by Lamar, 22-7, vs. Alabama, 20-11.

Little was known in North Carolina about James Madison this time last year but the Dukes gave the eventual NCAA champion Tar Heels one of their toughest games of the tournament in dropping a 52-50 decision.

"We like a medium tempo, no matter what (West Virginia coach Gale) Catlett says," said James Madison coach Lou Campanelli. "He says we play stall-ball. I don't think we do that. We play good defense. I don't coach his group and he doesn't coach mine."

James Madison is led by Dan Ruland, who is averaging 15.2 points and 6.7 rebounds a game.

West Virginia dropped out of the Top 20 rankings never to return after losing to North Carolina State and Stetson in December, but the Mountaineers won the Atlantic 10 Conference championship Saturday by defeating Temple. The Mountaineers beat North Carolina A&T 102-72 in the opening NCAA round last year but then lost to Fresno State 50-46.

Virginia Commonwealth was on a 15-game winning streak when it lost to Alabama-Birmingham in the semifinals of the Sun Belt Conference Tournament. The Rams are led by Calvin Duncan, averaging 17.4 points a game.

LaSalle beat Boston University 70-58 in Philadelphia Tuesday night to advance to Greensboro. The East Coast Conference champions were paced by Steve Black's 15 points.

Anderson shopping USFL market

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Cincinnati Bengals quarterback Ken Anderson, considered one of the best passers in professional football, is putting out feelers to the United States Football League.

Anderson's financial adviser, Louisville attorney J. Bruce Miller, confirmed that he's contacted three or four USFL teams, who've expressed "a keen level of interest" in the Bengals' 12-year veteran. No offers have been made, however, he said.

Miller said he contacted the new league at Anderson's request after 13 months of "fruitless" negotiations with the Bengals concerning an extension of Anderson's contract, which remains in effect for two more years.

"They have been totally unsatisfactory, to the point of being almost an embarrassment," Miller said, regarding the salary figures proposed by the Bengals.

According to figures released by the NFL Players Association, Anderson's base salary last year was $300,000.

Anderson himself downplayed the significance of the discussions with USFL teams, and expressed dismay that reports of his contract negotiations with the Bengals had been publicized.

"There are 101 people talking with the other league," he said. "But the situation between me and the Bengals ought to stay between us."

Anderson said he has a good rapport with club owners and wishes to remain in the city.

"We're not trying to dig out of my contract here," he said. "I have no desire to go anywhere else. I have told (Bengals assistant general manager) Mike Brown that as long as I can play in the NFL, I want to play in Cincinnati. That's how I really feel."

Anderson was selected as the NFL's player of the year two seasons ago when he led the Bengals to the Super Bowl in 1982.

Arnold: Definite case of biting the hand that feeds you

Larry Hovey

Isn't it amazing that — in some cases — after two and three years some Brigham Young University basketball players would find Coach Frank Arnold wanting in sufficien.. areas to demand his ouster?

That Arnold should have become so dumb in the last couple-three years carries one's thoughts back to Mark Twain's suggestion about fathers.

There wasn't — absolutely wasn't — one of the aforementioned players who in the last couple-three years questioned Arnold's assessment when he told them they were good enough to replace Danny Ainge and lead the Cougars to a national championship.

There wasn't one of them who said "please, sir, let me come to school on my own to prove myself first. Keep your $5,000 scholarship and if I prove worthy on the maplecourt, then, sir, I will allow you to provide me the NCAA allowable stipend for my next three seasons."

It's not that Arnold is gone after eight years at the BYU helm. He had a pretty spectacular rise after starting as the Pocatello High School coach 20-odd years ago. Heck, he got a lot better shake out of the situation there than Glenn Potter did.

So if BYU wants to replace Arnold or anybody in Provo, that's its perogative and we'll be the last to contest it.

But we are not at all impressed with the fact that the likes and dislikes of the individual players could be more than a minor factor in any decision. After a 15-11 year — and following the heady days of Danny Ainge and company — there isn't anyone in the basketball program at BYU who is happy at all.

You have to remember one salient point. These complaints about Arnold are coming from players who had to get a turnover in the closing seconds to beat Boise State when the Broncos were in their December thrash.

It goes back to the fact that if we got a nickel for every time someone said "we had a great team but a lousy coach" we'd have been retired years ago.

There's a lot of self-absolution in that statement. What the player is actually saying is "I was great, my pals on the team were good and the bench was just short of wonderful — but the coach wouldn't let us win."

Most of them know that because their dads told them so.

Now we've seen cases where that is true. We've seen coaching so bad that it makes your eyes water to sit and watch it. But those instances are rare enough to count on fingers of two hands in 25 years of watching.

Perhaps high school players have the perogative to make statements like that. After all, their time is free, their talents donated and most of the funding comes because mom and dad trundle down to the games from the fourth grade on to buy tickets.

But only perhaps.

Collegians may have our vote as having the least right to make any statements along that line because they had the choice to go with one coach or another, to one school or another -- in most cases. After one year they had the junior college alternative. After two, the transfer-redshirt possibility. In the vast majority of cases on the major college level, they get everything paid for — including board and room — plus a college education. They hired themselves out as players. They made their beds. They can always leave — and frequently do for minor reasons.

That college and professional players complain when a coach may suggest one or the other could have played a little better in certain circumstances is not surprising. Most of them were the darlings of their high schools, from the principal on down through the lowliest freshman.

They never heard a discouraging word but did hear a fearful amount of over-estimation that tends to exaggerate the subjective.

For instance, we have been assured a zillion (see how exaggeration sneaks in) times that Joe Dokes from the local high school is far better than anything CSI had on the court. The guy who's telling us that isn't telling the kid that he's still got a lot to learn and much improvement to make simply to attract a cursory recruiting eye.

So it is little wonder that when a college coach makes his recruiting speech he isn't telling the player "we think if you work hard as a freshman, redshirt as a sophomore and be a squad member for the next year or two, you might rise as high as seventh man on our team."

Heck, no. He's telling them "we can see you improving to the point that you might see considerable varsity action at the end of your freshman year."

The secret to recruiting is to find the marginal player who appears to have sufficient tools to make it. Everyone will be recruiting the Ralph Sampsons. A blind man knows his worth.

But the second secret is that when a coach takes a chance on signing four-five-six of those "hope" prospects, some of them have to pan out. If they don't, you get 15-14 records — or worse.

It is bad enough that a coach has to put his career on the line with guess-timations, let alone have these same non-producers turn on him and be needed.

The fact is the Western Athletic Conference — as viewed on Saturdays — was a mere shadow of its former self. The loss of the Arizona schools has made the WAC a much inferior product to what it was. A team can lose outside the conference (one Texas team made the NCAAs by going 11-1 in its conference and 1-12 outside) and it isn't particularly germaine. But not to dominate within a weak alignment is something else again.

The credibility of the BYU program is proven. The worth of each individual team must be reproven each year. And, fans, all teams are made up of individuals with varying degrees of talent. Bad talent invariably results in lousy coaching. Ask anyone in row seven.

Tulsa tied it 62-62 on Bruce Vanley's two free throws with 1:14 to go. TCU then went to a stall until Arnold launched a shot from the right corner to knock Tulsa, the 1981 NIT champ, out of the tournament.

Arnold led the Horned Frogs, making their first post-season tournament appearance since 1971, with 20 points and a career-high 17 rebounds. Darrell Browder added 18 points, including 12 in a row in the second half. Steve Harris paced Tulsa, 19-12, with 18 points. Ricky Ross added 15 and Herb Johnson 12.

TCU, 22-10, jumped to an 8-0 lead. Tulsa, which shot just 36 percent from the field in the first half, made it 14-14. Arnold, who had 14 points in the first half, gave the Frogs a 29-21 lead before Tulsa cut it to 31-27 at halftime.

Tulsa took a 42-41 lead on Vanley's rebound basket with 12:20 remaining. Browder's hot shooting on his 12-point streak put te Frogs ahead 52-50 and the teams traded baskets until the final minutes. TCU shot 52 percent for the game and outrebounded the Hurricane 34-29.

Iona 90, St. Bonaventure 76

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (UPI) — Steve Burtt scored 24 of his 33 points in the second half to pace Iona to a 90-76 victory over St. Bonaventure in a first-round game of the National Invitation Tournament.

The Bonnies, 20-10, took a 42-38 lead at halftime on 14 points by Mike Sheehey, but Burtt led a second-half Gaels' rally.

Iona, 22-8, outscored St. Bonaventure 20-6 in the first six minutes of the second half and the Gaels led 58-48 with 13 minutes left. The Bonnies never came closer than 5 points the rest of the game.

Arnie Russell added 14 points for the Gaels. Sheehey finished with 23 points to pace St. Bonaventure and Mark Jones added 22.

S. Carolina 100, ODU 90

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Strong foul shooting down the stretch and Jimmy Foster's career-high 31 points gave South Carolina a 100-90 victory over Old Dominion Wednesday night in an opening-round National Invitation Tournament game.

Foster also pulled down 12 rebounds and Kenny Holmes, a 6-foot-6 forward, had 24 points for the Gamecocks. Charlie Smith led Old Dominion, co-champions of the Sun Belt Conference, with 19 points.

A series of free throws in the final four minutes sealed the verdict for South Carolina. With the 30-second clock turned off with four minutes to play and South Carolina leading 82-74, the Gamecocks scored 16 of their final 18 points at the line.

DePaul 76, Minnesota 73

ROSEMONT, Ill. (UPI) — Tony Jackson scored 20 points and DePaul scored 10 straight points midway through the second half to post a 76-73 victory Wednesday night over Minnesota in a first round NIT game.

Tyrone Corbin added 16 points for the Blue Demons, who advanced to next week's second round with an 18-11 record. DePaul posted its first NIT victory since 1948 after losing four straight first-round appearances. Minnesota closed the season at 18-11.

The Gophers, who trailed by as many as 16 points, rallied in the closing three minutes but never came closer than 3 points. DePaul, which led 39-38 at halftime, opened a 56-46 lead in the first five minutes of the second half. Minnesota, led by Randy Breuer's 26 points, closed to 56-50 before DePaul reeled off 10 straight points to take a 66-50 lead with 9:52 remaining.

DePaul, which lost its first NCAA Tournament game the last three years, trailed by 5 points early on but took a 3-point lead late in the first half. Minnesota came back behind Breuer to take a 34-31 lead with 2:29 remaining before DePaul outscored the Gophers 8-4 to take the 1-point halftime lead.

New Orleans 99, LSU 94 (ot)

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Acie Sanders scored 7 of his 11 points in overtime Wednesday night to lead New Orleans to a 99-94 victory over Louisiana State in the first round of the National Invitation Tournament.

UNO's Lester Beans hit a free throw with four seconds left in regulation to tie it 84-84 and send the Privateers into overtime in their first major post-season game. Sanders tipped in his rebound and added a free throw with 1:09 left to give New Orleans a 93-90 lead. He added a layup and two free throws to secure the victory.

Claude Butler scored 15 second-half points to lead the Privateers from a 51-38 halftime deficit. Oscar Taylor scored 22 points for the Privateers, 23-6. Howard Carter, playing his final game for the Tigers, scored 21 points for LSU, 19-13.

Fresno State 71, UTEP 64

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — Desi Barmore scored 20 points, including eight straight free throws in the final minutes, to lead Fresno State to a 71-64 victory over Texas-El Paso Wednesday night in the opening round of the National Invitation Tournament.

Fresno State, which fell behind by 10 in the first half, caught the Miners with eight minutes left, tying it 50-50. In the next five minutes Barmore connected on the eight free throws and scored twice from the field.

Bulldogs Ronnie Anderson and Bernard Thomspon had 17 points each. The Miners were led by Dave Feitl with 19 points and Kent Lockhart with 11.

CSI tops Glendale for first tour win

PHOENIX — Riding their biggest hitting game of the tour, College of Southern Idaho's Golden Eagles broke into the win column in Arizona by beating Glendale 16-10 Wednesday afternoon.

The Eagles pounded out 16 hits and highlighted a seven-run second inning with three triples. But it was seven runs in the middle innings that finally let them move out of reach.

CSI winds up its spring-break southern trip with single games today and Friday evening, going against Phoenix Community College and Arizona State jayvees, respectively.

Phil Braase led the Eagles in production, picking up three singles and driving in six runs while Jeff Schow was 3-4 and Mike Duncan was 3-6 with a pair of triples and three RBIs.

Meanwhile, Jerome product Rusty Palmer held Glendale off the scoreboard for two innings while CSI was building up a 9-0 lead. But the Arizona team chased Palmer in the third during a seven-run eruption and CSI used five more pitchers to secure the victory.

"The pitching was a little spotty again," said Assistant Coach Jim Dawson. "But our hitters just hit the heck out of it. There were some shots."

That hitting was most evident in the second inning when Mike Randall opened with a triple and stayed there while Schow moved to second on a walk and steal. Braase delivered both with a single and romped in when Duncan unloaded a triple. After Scott Pugmire singled in Duncan, Jim Kotkas drilled a two-bagger off the centerfield wall at 410 feet to put runners at second and third. Dale Crouse singled those runners home and came around when Schow followed with a three-bagger.

Cruz retains junior featherweight title

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Leo Cruz of the Dominican Republic scored a unanimous decision over South Korea's Soon Hyung-Chung Wednesday night to retain his World Boxing Association junior featherweight title.

Sampson cited by UPI for third time

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ralph Sampson, one of the most storied names in the history of college basketball, Wednesday was named UPI's Player-of-the-Year-for-the-third consecutive season.

The 7-foot-4 Virginia center, who returned for his senior season after again spurning offers from the NBA, becomes just the third player in the college game to win the award three years in a row.

Oscar Robertson of Cincinnati (1958-60) and Bill Walton of UCLA (1972-74) were the others. However, because of freshman ineligibility rules at the time, Robertson and Walton played just three varsity seasons. Sampson did not win the award his freshman year.

In balloting by 152 sports writers and broadcasters across the country, Sampson was the overwhelming choice. Winning by a 3-to-1 margin over his closest opponent, he received 83 votes to 28 for North Carolina guard Michael Jordan. Five others were next with 6 votes each.

Tied for third place were freshman Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma, Dale Ellis of Tennessee, Sam Perkins of North Carolina, Keith Lee of Memphis State and Sidney Green of Nevada-Las Vegas.

"I think now he falls into the category of Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar) and Walton," Virginia coach Terry Holland said of Sampson.

Allen mulls Marshall job

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (UPI) -- Nevada-Reno head basketball coach Sonny Allen met with Marshall University officials in Chicago Wednesday to discuss the vacant head coaching job at the Huntington school.

"I am willing to hear what they say," Allen said. "I'm interested, but that doesn't mean I'll take the job."

Allen, a former player at Marshall and Moundsville High School, was recruiting in the San Francisco area Tuesday and planned to go to Dallas Thursday. Marshall Athletic Director Lynn Snyder and possibly some members of the school's search committee were to interview Allen in Chicago.

The vacancy at Marshall was created by the resignation of Bob Zuffelato, who this year led the Thundering Herd to its first 20-win season in a decade.

Two other candidates for the job were reportedly interviewed this week.

Wilson put on probation

HOUSTON (UPI) — Houston Oiler defensive back J.C. Wilson pleaded guilty Wednesday to driving while intoxicated and driving with a suspended license and was sentenced to $1,000 in fines and two years probation.

Harris County Criminal Court at Law Judge Jimmie Duncan accepted Wilson's pleas and sentenced him to a year in prison, suspended in lieu of two years probation, and a $500 fine on the drunk driving charge.

On the driving with suspended license charge, Duncan specified three days in jail and a $500 fine.

Prosecutor Chuck Noll said Wilson would not spend any additional time in jail because he already had spent two days in jail and, with credit for "good time," would be counted as having served three days in jail.

"With good time credit, he'll be covered on the extra day," Noll said.

Wilson was arrested Jan. 12 outside Sportsman's Lodge. He was driving a car in which Oiler defensive back Greg Stemrick was riding when Stemrick was charged with cocaine possession. Stemrick's case is still pending.

Rosenbloom case closed

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The U.S. Justice Department has said there are "no facts" to warrant an investigation into the drowning death of Los Angeles Rams owner Carroll Rosenbloom, a local official said Wednesday.

County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn had asked U.S. Attorney General William French Smith to investigate the April 1979 death off Golden Beach, Fla., following a Public Broadcasting Service TV show earlier this year suggesting Rosenbloom was murdered.

Dan Wolf, a spokesman for Hahn, said the supervisor was informed by Smith's office, "There are no facts at this time that would warrant an investigation."

Walton faces operation

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — San Diego Clippers' center Bill Walton will not travel with the team on the road anymore this year because of a nagging ankle injury that will probably be operated on during the off season.

Walton has been sidelined for the last five games with a sore right ankle that is caused by pressure on the joint, Clippers' general manager Paul Phipps said Tuesday.

Phipps said Walton will probably undergo minor surgery after the season to correct the problem.

Walton will miss the remaining six road games in the Clippers' schedule and play only the 10 remaining home games.

Walton sat out two years with recurring stress fractures in his left foot before making a comeback this season.

Tabb wins Owens award

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mary Decker Tabb, who set seven world records in women's track and field last year, Wednesday was named the recipient of the 1983 Jesse Owens International Amateur Athlete Award.

The award was presented to Tabb Wednesday night at a midtown hotel.

A total of 26 athletes were originally eligible for the award, but a world-wide panel of judges narrowed the field down to Tabb, Carl Lewis and Daley Thompson.

Tabb, who set the women's world indoor mile record three times in 1982, became the first woman to win the Jesse Owens Award.

Texas rests atop ratings

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) -- After winning 13 of 14 games, Texas moved into the No. 1 spot in Collegiate Baseball's nationwide survey of coaches, sports writers and sports information directors, the publication announced Wednesday.

Texas, 18-4, drew 496 power index points, two points ahead of second-ranked Wichita State, 16-4, in the survey through March 15.

Miami, 21-7, whose players belted 13 home runs in a recent seven-game stretch, was ranked No. 3 at 491 points, trailed by Houston, 18-0, 488; and Stanford, 15-5-1, 485. Eric Hardgrave has paced Stanford with eight home runs this season.

NBA talks break off

NEW YORK (UPI) -- Contract talks aimed at a new NBA collective bargaining agreement broke off after five hours Wednesday, with no comment from either the Players Association or the league.

Negotiators from both sides met in New York under the continued threat of a players' strike scheduled for April 2, just before the league's playoffs would begin.

The NBA announced negotiations are scheduled to continue on Monday.

Donovan picked as best

ATLANTA (UPI) -- Anne Donovan of Old Dominion University was named Wednesday to receive the first Naismith Award as the women's college basketball player of the year.

NFL battles Raiders in suit's penalty phase

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle, testifying at possibly the most devastating court action in the league's history, said Wednesday the Los Angeles Raiders' goal of massive season ticket sales in the cavernous Coliseum would not likely be achieved.

Rozelle was the first witness to be called in the penalty phase of the antitrust suit filed by the Raiders and Los Angeles Coliseum against the NFL. The same jury that ruled last year the league violated antitrust laws by blocking the team's move from Oakland could award the Raiders and Coliseum up to $90 million in damages.

Under questioning by Raiders' attorney Joseph Alioto, Rozelle — general manager of the Los Angeles Rams during the late 1950s when that team called the Coliseum home — said no team should hope to fill the 92,500-seat Coliseum on a regular basis, noting that only 28,000 of the seats are between the end zones.

"When I was with the Rams, we just couldn't fill all those end zone seats," Rozelle said. "We just couldn't do it. The larger stadiums just can't force a large season-ticket sale. The public, rather than buy poor seats for the whole season, will buy a decent seat when it's available, on a week-to-week basis.

"And when there's a really big game, people know the TV blackout will be lifted and they can stay home and watch the game."

The Raiders claim the NFL's actions that blocked the move from the 55,000-seat Oakland Coliseum for two years cost the team millions in unsold season tickets. Team officials said because they were not able to actively sell season tickets until late last summer, there was no chance they could produce a large sale of season tickets.

Based on those alleged losses and losses incurred in television contracts, the Raiders claim the league should pay them $25 million in damages. The Coliseum is asking $5 million, and all antitrust penalties are automatically tripled.

Bruin tennis continues improvement

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Each season the status of Twin Falls High School's tennis team has improved, at least materially.

Last year the high school tennis courts were enhanced by wind screens. This year, the Bruins have the pleasure of sharpening their strokes against the offerings of a ball machine, for which the team raised funds.

Having gained some nice possessions, Coach Clovis Johnson thinks it's about time for Twin Falls to gain more victories, particularly against the perennially tough Boise schools and at the state tournament. He believes the Bruins, in only their third year as an organized team, can make such strides this year.

"I honestly believe we have the people to compete with anybody at state," Johnson said.

Johnson is especially excited about the prospects of the boys' team. "I hate to use the word 'awesome,' but it's going to be, as far as I'm concerned," he said about the squad.

If the Bruins indeed come to inspire awe, the primary sources will probably be seniors Mike Rice and Scott Guthrie and sophomore Jeff Lambert. "They all can play with kids in Boise," Johnson said. "They're gonna know that we're for real."

Steve Benkula and Sean Sadler combine to form Twin Falls' No. 1 doubles team, with Doug Peterson and Chris Rose at No. 2. Completing the roster are returnees Ryan McDermott and Mike Kerbs and newcomers Colin Muldoon and Mike Otero.

Leading the girls' contingent will be juniors Tricia Swartling and Laura Rice and senior Kirsten Daigh. Johnson said Daigh will definitely be the No. 3 singles player, while Swartling and Rice will likely switch between the top two spots.

The Bruins' schedule:

March 19	Nampa
March 25	at Highland
March 25	at Pocatello
March 29	Jerome
April 9	quadrangular (Jerome, Burley, Highland)
April 14	Wood River
April 16	at Nampa and Caldwell
April 22	at Jerome
April 23	Meridian
April 28	at Wood River

Rangers still perfect in Pompano Beach

By United Press International

The Texas Rangers are perfect in Pompano.

At Pompano Beach, Fla., George Wright's two-out, three-run homer capped a five-run ninth inning rally Wednesday and led the Texas Rangers to a 10-7 Grapefruit League victory over the Houston Astros.

Billy Sample, who went 4-for-4 to raise his average to .600, cut Houston's lead to 7-6 with a leadoff homer in the ninth off loser Mark Ross. Rookie Curtis Wilkerson singled with one out, took second on a wild pitch and scored on Larry Parrish's two-out single to tie the game. After Astros' second baseman Bill Doran couldn't handle Pete O'Brien's bad-hop grounder, Wright homered over the right-field wall to give him 11 RBI in nine spring games.

Odell Jones pitched the final two innings to pick up the victory for Texas, which has won three straight. The Rangers are 6-4 overall, but 6-0 at home.

•At St. Petersburg, Fla., Tito Landrum doubled home the lead run and Glenn Brummer singled in an insurance run in the seventh inning to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 9-7 victory over the Cincinnati Reds. St. Louis ace Joaquin Andujar pitched five innings of one-hit ball in a B-game as the Cardinals beat the Reds 1-0. In the A-game, Keith Hernandez had a double and two singles for the Cardinals, scoring two runs and driving in one. David Green, who was batting .421 this spring, had a two-run pinch triple in the third inning.

•At Dunedin, Fla., back-to-back doubles by Dave Collins and Jesse Barfield in the fifth inning paced the Toronto Blue Jays to a 3-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox. Starter Mike Eichhorn was the winner while newcomer Floyd Bannister took the loss.

spring training NOTES

•At Orlando, Fla., Minnesota raked Philadelphia pitchers for 17 hits, including seven extra base hits, in posting an 8-5 triumph over the Phillies. Tom Brunansky singled and hit a two-run homer, Gary Gaetti and Randy Bush hit two doubles each, Jim Eisenreich tripled and Kent Hrbek added a double in Minnesota's biggest hit output of the spring. Bill Robinson and Tony Perez slugged Philadelphia homers.

•At Winter Haven, Fla., Tom Veryzer cracked his first homer of the spring and then singled home the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning to lead the New York Mets to an 11-6 victory over Boston. With the game tied 4-4, Rusty Tillman led off the eighth with a double off loser Dennis Boyd. Mike Howard beat out a bunt single and Veryzer followed with an RBI single. New York rookie Darryl Strawberry cracked his first homer and Brian Giles added a three-run shot. Tony Armas homered for the Red Sox.

•At West Palm Beach, Fla., the Pittsburgh Pirates smashed three home runs in the ninth inning for a 4-2 triumph over Atlanta. Dick Davis led off the Pirates' spree with a one-out homer in the ninth to tie the game 2-2. One out later, Dale Berra and Jose Ortiz hit consecutive solo homers.

Jerome plans 5-kilometer fun run

JEROME — A five-kilometer fun run will be held at Jerome Saturday in conjunction with the St. Benedict's Hospital health fair.

Sponsored by the Jerome Recreation District, the run begins at 10 a.m. at the Jerome County Fairgrounds. Registration opens at 9 a.m.

Recreation officials said T-shirts will be given to all participants in the seven-age classifications.

Age divisions include 12 years and under, 13 through 15 years, 16 through 19 years, 20 through 29, 30 through 39, 40 through 49 and 50 and over.

A $5 registration fee will cover expenses of the event. The 3.1 mile run is open to anyone interested. Recreation Director Mike Pepper said some of the Rim Runners from Twin Falls have indicated they will enter and other contestants who are preparing for competition later this spring will be trying out their legs in the Saturday event.

Hagerman Hatchery switches to steelhead

Engineers mitigate dam loss

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — Anadromous fish are moving centerstage at the Hagerman National Fish Hatchery with steelhead becoming the star.

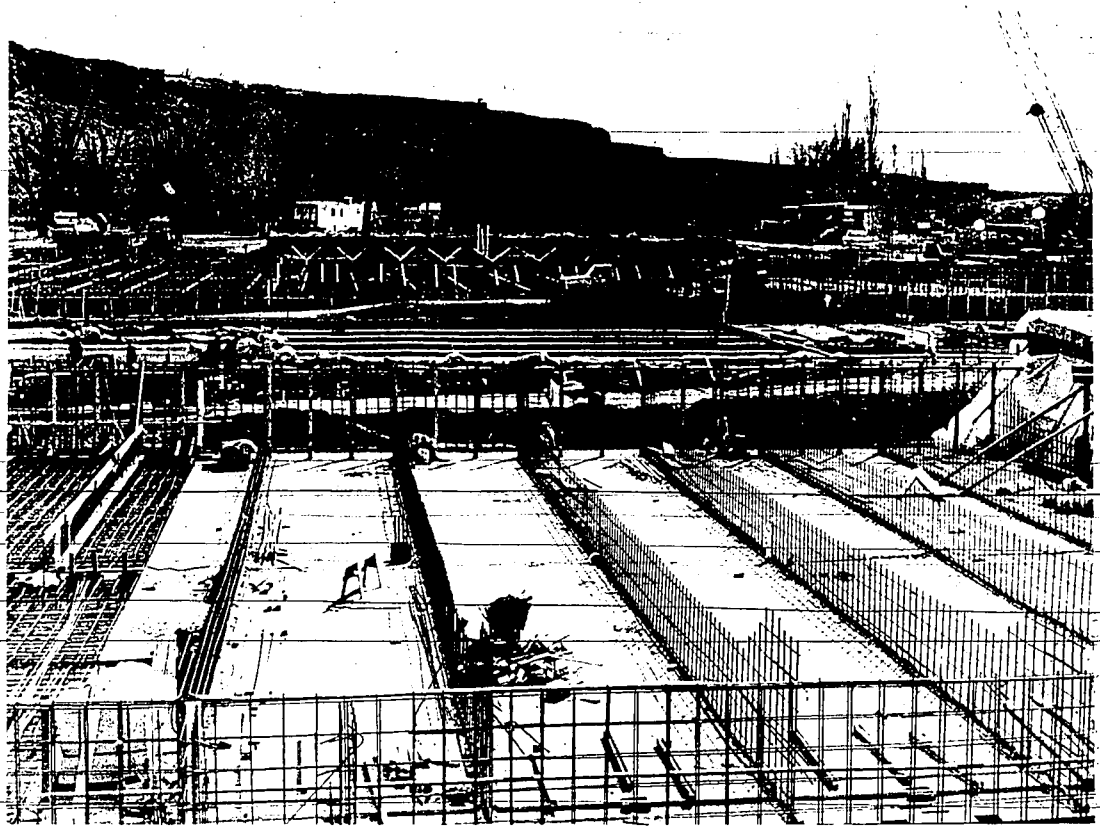
Workmen have reached about the 70 percent mark in construction of a major raceway complex with eyeing and hatching facilities that within a year could be spewing out 1,500,000 smolts for planting in the upper reaches of the main Salmon River near Galena and East Fork near Challis.

The hatchery, one of several either in construction or on the drawing board, is part of the Army Corps of Engineers "compensation" plan for the series of dams on the lower Snake and Columbia rivers.

The Hagerman facility could produce some steelhead this year although a couple of complications have arisen. But when it comes on line, it will join Idaho Power's Niagara Steelhead Hatchery plus the Crystal Springs plant to provide an annual one million pounds of smolts.

The Hagerman complex will have a capacity of 330,000 pounds. Crystal Springs will be a shade over 300,000 and Idaho Power plans to double the Niagara capacity to something in the area of 400,000 or more.

Part and parcel with the steelhead enhancement program is another Corps project to assist in the return of Idaho's spring Chinook salmon run. The salmon phase of the program is running a little behind the steelhead at this point but a major step toward catching up was completed two weeks ago when an $8.1 million contract was let to a Denver company to begin construction of a weir, eyeing station and rearing facility at Decker Flats, just upstream from the Redfish Lake steel bridge.



Hagerman's National Fish Hatchery will add 330,000 pounds of steelhead smolts to the Salmon River run when these 66 raceways are completed

Currently, work is progressing well on the new facilities. The initial stocking of the plant will come from Idaho Power weir eggs on the Pahsimerol River near Ellis.

To receive those fish, a hatching and incubation facility is being built at Hagerman, just above 66 raceways that will be 100 feet long and 10 feet wide. These are arranged in a three-tier configuration which will use the 70 second-feet of water surfacing on the property basically two times.

The second tier will be 30 inches lower than the first and the third is another 30 inches below that.

To assuage environmentalists, during clean up and cleaning of the raceways, the water will be diverted to a huge pollution abatement settling pond before being returned to Riley Creek. At peak use, the pond will settle out 800 pounds of fish solids per day.

Dave Bruhn, hatchery manager, said the over-riding criteria for redesigning the entire hatchery was to make "efficient use of our water. Some of it was used just once. When (suitable hatchery) water is as scarce as it is now, that's not efficient use," he said.

"A commercial hatchery might use the water as much as seven times but for us to get the quality needed for these steelhead to get to the ocean and back, we felt three times might be a maximum," he said.

In addition to the steelhead raceways, another 24 will be added behind the current hatching station. Combined with 12 already there, another 100,000 pounds of rearing capacity will become available. These raceways will largely produce different species at the option of the Fish and Wildlife Service and represent a major policy change in the hatchery's operation.

The fourth major change will be dismantling of the currently used raceways and razing of the administration offices. The area currently holding the raceways will be filled in and new offices and visitors center raised on that location. Plans call for that phase to be completed by Thanksgiving.

This total re-arranging of the hatchery facilities was part of the desire to efficiently use the water, Bruhn said. He said, "The elevation and the condition of the raceways we have now did not lend themselves to multiple water use. We had added construction expense because we had to lower the level to assure a gravity flow of water rising at the east end of the property. We didn't want to get into pumping because of the initial cost and the possibility of steadily increasing power costs."

Although the hatchery will obtain its original stock from the Pahsimerol weir, plans call for the hatchery to become reliant totally on its own return.

These will be collected at the Sawtooth (Decker Flat) weir.

Currently, plans call for a portion of Hagerman smolts to be planted in the East Fork of the Salmon River and the remainder in the upper reaches of the Main Salmon. The Decker Flat facility also will incorporate a release site, meaning the Hagerman Hatchery transports will be hauling fish over Galena Summit.

Two things currently give the program pause. The first is the threat of IHN disease, a viral illness that caused some damage at Niagara this year and is an ever-present Sword of Damocles over every crop.

"We have tested the Pahsimerol fish and they all checked out positive as IHM carriers. We haven't had any of that disease here and we're hopeful of never having an outbreak. But I think the only way to assess that is we've been fortunate."

The other is a literal roadblock thrown up by the Hagerman Highway District. The district imposed weight and speed limits in January on its access roads to the hatchery and to this point hasn't wavered.

The corps has offered to place money in escrow to cover any damage incurred this spring and perhaps participate in upgrading the road system to specifications later. However, no agreement has been reached and negotiations are continuing.

The district's edict has put a crimp in delivering heavy construction loads into the site and without some accommodation, would preclude hauling smolts out in future years.

That is a major problem but the "antiquities act" also played its part in the construction.

"The corps put out two contracts for groups to come in and look for artifacts," Bruhn said. "I guess it used to be that everytime the wind blew (the sand around) you could go out and pick up arrowheads and other artifacts. It was kind of interesting to see these professors and their students come in here full of enthusiasm and after a few days of sifting and shoveling, see that enthusiasm wane. Neither group found very much."

Bruhn said the conversion of the hatchery to anadromous fish came in line with the new directions set forth by the Reagan administration.

This hatchery has been in operation since it was purchased from the Bickel family in 1932, he said. For most of that time, it has produced rainbow trout which were planted in Magic Reservoir, South Fork of the Boise and generally waters west of Hagerman.

Four years ago it began raising some steelhead and since 1980 has participated in an "egg bank" program for Snake River fall chinook salmon. Adult salmon trapped at Ice Harbor Dam have been the egg source. Hagerman raises the salmon to about four inches in length and are then trucked to the lower Granite Dam Pool, near Asotin, Wash., for release. This program is designed to provide future brood stock for the Lower Snake River Compensation plan.

Retrievers need some finishing touches

Editor's Note: This in the last in a series of columns dealing with the training of hunting dogs.

Mike Harrop Outdoors

If you've followed the last several columns you now have some idea how to train a retriever to do his job.

You've taken him from obedience training to retrieving unless you had him retrieving from the cradle with the puppy games I described.

You've shot some pigeons or bought ducks and pheasants from a game farm, killed them and allowed your dog to retrieve feathers.

But there is a lot more to a retriever than the ability to fetch a bird he's seen fall to earth.

Really good retrievers can be directed onto birds they didn't know were down. They can remember several fallen birds and pick them up.

They will respond to directions from their master, even though he may be several hundred feet away and they'll quarter through cover for upland birds, flushing them within the gun's range.

You can teach a dog to remember multiple birds by throwing multiple dummies while he sits at heel. There's no trick to it at all, as long as you give him four 15 minutes of back yard training every day.

After all the dummies have been thrown, let him retrieve them one at a time, sending him back for another as soon as one has been delivered to your hand.

James Lamb Free, author of "Training Your Retriever," is probably the originator of the baseball diamond method.

Free's book is considered the bible of trainers and should be purchased by anyone who hopes to teach his dog to retrieve.

In the baseball diamond method, the dog is taken from him with few obstructions to the dog's sight.

Put the dog on an imaginary pitcher's mound and make him sit. Throw a dummy over the dog's head to an imaginary third base. Make an overhand motion with your arm from the shoulder and send the dog after the bird.

Simple repetition will have the dog moving back to pick up the bird and make the retrieve.

To teach the dog to move to the right, put him on the pitcher's mound and throw a dummy to first. Then point your right arm straight out at right angles to your body to indicate the direction the dog should go.

When he responds well to seeing the dummy thrown and watching your signal, try him on multiples with a dummy thrown to each base.

You use your hand signals to direct him to the dummy you want him to pick up. Traditionally, the last-thrown dummy is the first one retrieved.

However, I've often found that the last duck shot may not be the one swimming raggedly toward a cattail and bullrush jungle.

Therefore, I teach my dogs to go after the bird which I select. However, if you have field trial aspirations for your dog, have him get the last bird first.

Finally, you can take your dog to an area covered with brush to obstruct his sight line and already planted with dummies.

When you first send him after a bird he does not know is there, he'll probably run right out and make the retrieve if you've played the baseball game faithfully.

I like to hone my dogs up on this by planting an area where I'm to walk later with them.

When I take the dogs, I send them after the planted dummies along the walk. It worked great until someone followed me one day and stole all my planted dummies. I never did get them back.

Gun shyness is a big problem once it settles into a dog, but it can be prevented by properly introducing a young dog to the gun.

While you're engaged in some activity pleasant for the dog and associated with hunting, such as working with the retriever's dummy, have an associate fire a .22 off in the distance.

As the dummies are throw, have the gun come closer and closer to the dog.

When the gunner is firing from beside the dog and the animal shows no sign of fear, go through the entire process again with a heavy shotgun.

Over the year, flushing dogs such as the Cocker and Springer spaniels have fallen into serious declines due to the combined pressures of the show-dog cults and the Labrador retriever.

The pretty-dog set ruined those strains which fell into their hands by breeding for characteristics other than hunting ability.

But the Labradors helped join their cousins through competition. The truth is that it is much easier to teach a retriever to work as a flushing dog than it is to teach a flushing dog to retrieve.

Then let him follow the birds until they get up, making sure that the dog stays within shotgun range.

If the dog has a tendency to race ahead and flush the birds out of range, work him on a 30-foot check cord.

When he attempts to run ahead and flush birds wildly, raise your end of the cord as high as possible just as he runs out of slack.

With luck, he'll do a flip in the air and land on his back. A few such landings and he'll remember to stay within gun range.

Committee refuses to weaken wardens

BOISE (UPI) — The Senate Resources and Environment Committee has ditched two bills that would sharply reduce the police powers of Idaho Fish and Game Department conservation officers.

On a 6-2 vote, the committee agreed to hold a measure aimed at limiting wardens to issuing citations only for game-law violations. Later, the panel used a voice vote to pigeonhole a bill that would altogether take away the power of game officers to issue citations.

The proposals were sponsored by Sen. Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, who says game wardens have too much authority under current law.

Sens. Marsden Williams, R-Idaho Falls, and David Little, R-Emmett, attempted to have the first bill reported out to the floor for a vote by the full Senate. But a majority of the committee, heeding protests about the suggested restrictions, halted the legislation.

Legislature imposes new fine for salmon poaching

BOISE (UPI) — The state Senate has approved three wildlife bills which increase penalties for illegally killing Chinook salmon, extend trapping rights to young Idahoans and make it easier for sportsmen to sell hides and mounted animals.

The first measure, sponsored by Sen. David Little, R-Emmett, would require anyone who illegally catches a Chinook pay the state $100 in addition to any criminal fines which may be assessed.

Another bill, this one offered by Sen. Kermit Kiebert, D-Hope, would allow state residents under the age of 12 to trap animals.

Kiebert said the proposal would correct a legislative oversight which occurred in a previous session when hunting license conditions were set for youngsters. Those rules limited licenses to residents above the age of 11, and inadvertently included the same restriction on trapping permits, Kiebert said.

The third bill makes it legal for hunters to sell stuffed animals and hides if they were taken in accordance with state Fish and Game laws, said sponsoring Sen. Terry Sverdsten.

Sverdsten said current laws, which are seldom enforced, prohibit most sales of animal parts between two private parties.

Under the new proposal, any sale of hides, heads or horns from bighorn sheep and mountain goats would remain prohibited.

Soil Conservation Districts spearhead Rock Creek cleanup

Swen

Bet you're like me. You curse the darkness but fail to light that one candle when most needed.

The darkness most cursed by outdoor groups is pollution of our lakes and streams. Most, like me, love to curse the condition but have no real solutions.

Let me tell you of a group that has lit that candle and is doing something about the pollution in Rock Creek and other areas around the Magic Valley.

Dan LaPant, area biologist for the federal soil conservation service, was contacted about the progress being made on solving the pollution on Rock Creek, called by many the worst in the nation.

LaPant was quick to point out that it was local groups that were working on Rock Creek — Snake River Conservation District and Twin Falls Conservation District. They are doing most of the planning, most of the work and the federal government is in an advisory position only.

These districts, with cooperation of area farmers, have taken it upon themselves to help solve the condition. In effect, they have lit one candle and have done something to solve the problem.

Certain areas of Rock Creek have been shocked to get an idea of how many fish are in the creek in these areas. The reason Swen got involved at all was a request by LaPant for me to fish a section of the creek and find out for myself what the conditions are now. Then on these dates each year, myself or others could fish this same stretch of the stream and from this actual fishing could determine if the efforts to control pollution were having an effect.

Must mention that I had other commitments (really ain't that good a fisherman to be placed in a position of determining just how good it is or will be). So had to refuse. But the fishing will be done and the results entered into journals and the comparisons can be made on a year-to-year basis.

Swen does not know all that is being done, but, with cooperation of our farmers along Rock Creek and the work being done by the local conservation districts, we can look forward to action being done by people who care and people who have to live next to this creek.

A confession. My frau and I sneaked off to Rock Creek last Sunday afternoon and in but two and one-half hours of fishing time, she caught five and I finally hooked two. The creel take was five browns about eight to 10 inches and two rainbow, one female about 13 inches. Now that ain't bad for fishing in your backyard.

My candle is to let you know that someone cares.

Humorist Will Rogers once said of the land "you know, they just ain't making it no more."

In his laconic way, he went to the heart of land use disputes confronting us westerners today.

On March 7, the BLM announced which lands it intends to sell during the fiscal year 1984. The acreage total apparently will be about 14,000 acres. The Forest Service announced Tuesday the inventory of public lands it would like to sell.

There will be land for sale around Magic Reservoir but if you're interested, you must request the maps of this land and understand what land you wish to bid on.

For those of you who ain't got the money to bid on any of these, just keep watching for California welcome signs (no trespassing) and then you will know the sales were completed.

Here we go again. Now Senator Jimmy McClure has declared his intention to fashion a state wilderness bill for Idaho.

This is a state-by-state effort to settle roadless area disputes. Congressional delegations in Oregon, Washington and California are pursuing this course and other may follow. And all this time you thought it was settled years ago.

Telephone survey helps management

Stu Murrell

JEROME — What happened to all that information on your hunt that you gave to the gal on the telephone?

This is a common question by sportsmen. The answer is it provides the Department of Fish and Game exact information on harvest and hunter success for proper management of our wildlife in Idaho. For example, hunters in Region 4 indicated they had a high success rate in our controlled deer and elk hunts last fall.

Unit 54 south of Twin Falls is the most popular deer area in Region 4 and our telephone survey showed there were 2,000 permits, 1,805 sportsmen actually hunted and they harvested 1,006 deer for a 59 percent success rate. There were 760 bucks and 306 does taken in that total of 1,066 deer.

The telephone questionnaire provides the department with a much more accurate tally than the old method of voluntary return of deer report cards which was used for many years in Idaho.

•Unit 45, north of Glenns Ferry, for rifle hunters showed a phenomenal 82 percent success with a bucks-only season and muzzleloaders had 33 percent success.

•Unit 55, Albion, 60 percent success with the either-sex hunt and the lowest of any unit for antlered-only with 18 percent.

•Unit 56, attracted the lowest percentage of people actually hunting with only 556 out of 800 permittees in the field. They had 45 percent success.

•Unit 57, 61 percent success.

All of these areas produced excellent hunting, particularly since most of them were for antlered-only seasons. The total projected harvest taken in Region 4 in our controlled hunts was 3,201 deer.

There is a limited elk herd in Region 4 and, with the exception of archery, all our hunts are on a controlled basis.

Unit 45 had the highest success with 20 permittees bagging 13 bulls in an antlered-only hunt. The remaining units ranged from 30 percent for the bulls-only hunt in Unit 49 to 53 percent success in Unit 48's either-sex season. The elk is a much more difficult animal to pursue than deer and these success ratios are considered good.

On a statewide basis, the moose permittees lucked out on 89 percent of their animals. An 83 percent success was recorded for antelope hunters, 61 percent of the mountain goat permittees were successful and sheep hunters bagged 63 animals for 51 percent success. All of these are impressive success ratios, particularly on the sheep with the three-quarter curl rule.

The current mild winter in most of Idaho should provide for good big game survival and we are looking forward to another excellent season in 1983.

Stu Murrell is the conservation educator for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's regional office in Jerome.

Author Bob Hirsch displays Lake Powell trophies

Steelhead

In recent years the hatchery has provided large numbers of rainbows to the Duck Valley Indian Reservation where the tribe has set up fee fishing.

"The feeling now is that the Bureau of Indian Affairs should be funding any project like that, not the Fish and Wildlife Service," Bruhn said. "Part of the policy indicates that something like rainbow trout in Idaho is a resident strain and it should be the policy of the state to uphold that population. We will have no rainbow in the hatchery, it appears, unless the Fish and Wildlife Service would happen to come back to them in future years for some reason."

Bruhn likened anadromous fish to migratory waterfowl, noting "they cross state and national boundaries and hence are a more legitimate interest from a federal standpoint."

Since the hatchery and Fish and Wildlife Service are federally operated like the Army Corps of Engineers, it was natural that they should combine efforts in this mitigation project, Bruhn pointed out.

With the anadromous program, particularly in the case of salmon, barely in the fledgling stage, Bruhn guesses those extra 36 raceways and 100,000 pounds of capacity will be used within the anadromous program by the service.

"Maybe they will instruct us to simply raise more steelhead or perhaps we will see some species of salmon in those raceways," Bruhn speculated. "That's my personal guess right now. Once the program is well under way, we could well see them used for other species but right now I think they'll be used in this program."

On the local scene, Bruhn said the doubling of the hatchery's capacity won't mean a commensurate impact on the economy.

"There will be some automation, particularly with these self-feeding units that are very popular now," Bruhn said. "Currently, we have six fulltime employes here and the most I could envision would be adding maybe two more."

"I think it will be very satisfying to produce fish and actually see the returns in a few years," he said, referring to the millions of rainbow trout he's helped raise and never knew if they showed up in the creel or simply rotted on the river bottom.

Lake Powell fishing nets literary acclaim

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Two well-published anglers have teamed to produce the first book on America's second largest man-made lake.

"Fishin' Lake Powell" by long-time friends Stan Jones and Bob Hirsch is obviously a labor of love with an unstated purpose.

"Someone should write about a lake with 1,960 miles of shoreline, 96 major canyons and 12 species of game fish. It might as well be us."

Getting top billing are Powell's Big Four — largemouth bass, striped bass, walleye and crappie. Also well covered are rainbow and brown trout, bluegill, green sunfish, yellow bullhead, northern pike, channel catfish and a recent addition, smallmouth bass.

On the lakes regulations, the authors say "the rules are simple. Angling is allowed day or night, from shore or craft, with or without lights, anywhere (except from public docks where posted), every day of the year."

The first fish pictured and described is the threadfin shad ("what all major species prefer to eat") and which Jones said he has tracked in a school "some 50 feet wide that extended for seven miles."

The book also explodes myths concerning the lake. "Myth number one: The best largemouth bass fishing is in the upper half of the lake, right? Wrong! The best place to fish for bass is anyplace . . . from Wahweap Marina on the south end to Hit Marina on the north end."

Steelheaders cow North Idaho town

OROFINO (UPI) — A record number of steelhead trout are returning to the Dworshak National Fish Hatchery this year — the start of a trend that could make the small town of Orofino the steelhead fishing capital of the world, federal and state officials say.

But not everyone is happy with the situation, particularly law enforcement authorities who warn an influx of people could cause problems in the area.

"You put this out nationally, and you'll be invaded," said Bob Weddell, an avid steelhead fisherman and spokesman for the local health department. "This is going to be the steelhead fishing capital of the world."

The Clearwater County Sheriff's Office called a meeting this week with residents and federal and state officials to discuss the increasing numbers of fish and what problems to expect.

Fishery experts told the crowd a record number of steelhead trout are returning this year to the hatchery in what is expected to be a sustained fishery.

"I would expect that this is going to be the standard of the future," state fisheries manager Bert Bowler said.

The run is so large this year that the gate across the fish ladder into the hatchery had to be closed one day because there was no way to handle the surplus trout, federal hatchery manager Wayne Olson said.

Public lands made theme

BOISE — The National Wildlife Federation is centering its attention on the importance of public lands for its 46th annual observance of National Wildlife Week.

The theme for the March 20-26 week is "This Land is Your Land: Public Lands Belong to All of Us."

Americans are co-owners of 740 million acres of federal lands — about one-third of the United States. Federal, state and local public lands in Idaho account for about 70 percent of the state's 53 million acres.

Pelts, horns and salami offered at auction

POCATELLO — A public auction of furs, wildlife parts, sporting gear and traps will be conducted by the Department of Fish and Game in Pocatello March 26.

Regional conservation educator Rod Parker said items can be inspected starting at 10 a.m. in the Idaho State Police building's conference room on Fifth Street South. The auction will start promptly at noon.

The auction items were confiscated or unclaimed after illegal fish and game activity and have been declared surplus by the department. Sales will be by oral bids on cash terms.

Pelts offered for sale include beaver, fox, muskrat, otter, bobcat, badger, fisher and mink. Other items to be auctioned are deer, elk and moose antlers and unclaimed traps and sporting gear including fishing rods and firearms. There also are 1,250 pounds of wild game salami.

Parker said a list of sale items is available by calling the department's Pocatello office at 232-4703.

Silica mine opening possible

SANDPOINT (UPI) — A geologist for a Montana mining company says there is a good possibility the firm will begin an open-pit mining operation to remove high-grade silica sand from a deposit near Lake Pend Oreille.

Bill Bratney, of Meridian Land and Mineral Co., Billings, Mont., said he believes the sand is a high grade used for glass production, and it would be cost effective for the company to mine, mill and market it.

Bratney said if the project is approved, mining the deposit — which he estimates to be about 15 million tons located in a layer 40 to 90 feet thick on about 160 acres — "would be a piece of cake using a reclaim-as-you-go open pit technique."

The deposit is located under about five to 10 feet of earth, he said, which would easily be ripped out with bulldozers without need for drilling or blasting.

Wrench case back in court

CHICAGO (UPI) — A former Sears, Roebuck & Co. employee, who claims the giant retailer stole his invention for a quick-release wrench, has won a rehearing in the U.S. 7th Circuit Court of Appeals.

The same court earlier this year threw out an $8.1 million judgment awarded to Robert M. Roberts, 38, of Red Bank, Tenn., who said Sears owed him millions for his invention.

In dismissing the award in January, the appeals court said the idea behind the invention was well known and that Roberts merely put it together before anyone else.

However, the appeals court said Monday it would agree to a rehearing. No date has been set for arguments, which will be heard by the entire eight-judge court.

Microwave sales heating up

NEW YORK (UPI) — After declining for the first time in 1982 because of the recession, sales of microwave ovens should improve this year by about 12 percent to 4.57 million units, a new study indicates.

Peter Allen, FIND-SVP's market research director, said falling interest rates, which are helping all appliance sales, will be one cause and replacement sales will be a significant factor for almost the first time. Replacement sales reached 9.5 percent of the market last year and could reach 23 percent by 1985.

Shipments totalled 20 million cookware units last year with a retail value of $240 million. Growth during the remainder of this decade could be 63 percent to 32.7 million units with a retail value of $392 million in 1982 dollars.

GM, Toyota open labor talks

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — General Motors Corp. and Toyota Motor Co., which will jointly build cars in California, have begun preliminary meetings needed before talks can open with the United Auto Workers.

John Smith, GM's director of worldwide product planning, said labor experts for the two automakers have begun briefing each other on the vast differences between the American system of labor management relations and the Japanese system.

GM and Toyota announced an agreement last month to jointly build sub-compacts at GM's vacant Fremont, Calif., assembly plant.

Amtrak shifts Zephyr route

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Amtrak board voted Wednesday to reroute its Chicago-San Francisco service through Colorado and Utah, ending Amtrak service in Wyoming.

The changeover, scheduled for April 25, would run the train through the heart of the Rocky Mountains over the Denver and Rio Grande Western, one of the most scenic rail lines in North America.

Dow absorbs drubbing

By GAIL COLLINS
United Press International

NEW YORK — Stock prices fell Wednesday despite good news on the economic recovery.

Several issues were battered when analysts revised their earnings forecasts.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 8.52 at 1,116.00, while the price of an average New York Stock Exchange share dropped 33 cents. Declines led advances 862-748 among the 1,983 issues traded.

The NYSE index dropped 0.82 to 86.40. Standard & Poor's index of 500 stocks was off 1.56 at 149.80.

Trading, fairly active for the first time this week, totaled 83,570,000 shares on the New York floor, up from Tuesday's 62,410,000. Composite volume of NYSE stocks, including those traded on outside markets, was 97,583,090 shares.

Government reports on February's economic activity were all positive Wednesday, but the market remained "confused about the character and quality of the economic recovery," said Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp.

Oil service companies had a bad day on Wall Street. Analysts for two major brokerage houses revised their earnings forecasts for the firms in light of oil price drops and a decrease in drilling activities.

Several department store chains reported higher earnings Wednesday and a number of retail stocks bucked the general trend, moving upward in active trading.

The stock market, which soared on the basis of January's rosy economic reports, has gotten mixed signals that left investors confused about what to do next.

On the NYSE, Continental Telephone was the most active issue, falling ¼ to 19¼. A block of 1,056,500 shares sold at 19.

Sony was second, up ¾ to 15. A block of 300,000 traded at 15 ½. General Instruments was third, plummeting 5¾ to 54⅞ after a Merrill Lynch analyst downgraded his earnings estimates for the firm. A block of 250,000 traded at 58 early in the day.

The American Stock Exchange index rose 1.51 to 381.64 and the National Association of Securities Dealers index of over-the-counter stocks was up 0.41 to 264.66.

On the Amex, Imperial Chemical was the most active issue, dropping ⅛ to 6⅛, followed by Wang Laboratories class B, down 1 at 31, and Dome Petroleum off 1-16 to 2 15-16.

Advances led declines 347-262 among the 812 issues traded on the Amex. Composite volume was 7,796,900 shares, up from 6,879,400 Tuesday.

On the Big Board, Schlumberger Ltd. was among the big losers of the day, down 3¼ to 39¼.

Auto industry sets pace as factory usage climbs

By DENIS G. GULINO
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Led by the auto industry, U.S. factories operated at 68.5 percent of capacity in February, the most since September, Federal Reserve System economists said Wednesday.

The increase from January was only 0.2 of a percentage point but revisions in earlier figures showed the improvement began sooner than previously reported. Factory use began growing in December, the Fed said, parallelling the Fed's earlier reported measure of industrial production.

On Wednesday the Fed reported the production level for the nation's factories, oil and gas wells and mines climbed 0.3 percent, the third month of improvement.

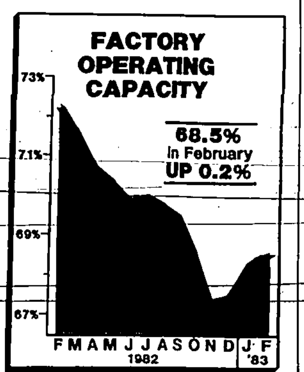
The February capacity figure was slightly above the rate for the fourth quarter of last year but not quite up to the average of the third quarter, 69.7 percent.

The auto industry led the way in February, reaching an operating rate of 59.2 percent, a big improvement over the rate as recently as November when it was only 48.9 percent of capacity.

February's auto production surge, which is slackening somewhat in March, also boosted the operating rate for the steel industry but rates "have continued to decline for petroleum refining and for some capital goods producing industries," the Fed said.

The past three months of improvement are still only tiny steps toward improving the nation's industrial pulse rate, an effort many analysts say could take years. February's increase did not raise the utilization rate to the low point hit during the 1975 recession, 69 percent.

A rate typical of times not afflicted with a recession would range in the 80 percent to 85 percent area. The utilization rate does not approach the theoretical 100 percent level except in times of war.



Home building soars during February

By DENIS G. GULINO
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Commerce Department announced Wednesday new housing construction climbed to an annual rate of 1.756 million units a year in February, a surprising improvement over January's record gain.

The benchmark annual rate was 93 percent ahead of the rate a year ago and up 2.9 percent from January despite leading analysts' expectations that February would show a decline because of bad weather.

It was the fastest monthly rate of construction in two and a half years, the department said. Analysts said the improvement is the latest indication that housing is undergoing an authentic boom related to lower mortgage interest rates, not just to better weather.

Building permits also increased 1 percent in February, a strong sign the building boom will be sustained.

As a result of February's increase, the nation's largest construction trade group, the National Association of Home Builders, raised its forecast Wednesday for 1983 housing starts to 1.448 million, a 50,000-unit increase from its previous forecast.

The government report showed single family housing starts last month declined 8.45 percent but not enough to take the annual rate below the million mark it topped in January after a long period of far fewer such starts.

January's increase was revised downward only slightly to 33.4 percent, a rate of 1.707 million units a year. The department previously said January showed a 35.9 percent jump. The January surge remained a record.

Northeastern states reported a 63.3 percent surge in housing starts to an annual rate of 576,000 units a year, the highest level of building in nine years in that region.

Gains in other regions were more modest. Western states reported a 10.9 percent increase in starts; North Central states had a 6 percent improvement, and Southern states showed a 9.9 percent decline.

"I didn't think we could continue to produce at these high levels, but it seems I was wrong," Michael Sumichrast, chief economist of the home builders' association, said. "It's a surprise number."

The association also is raising its 1984 outlook to show a 19.1 percent increase from this year.

Oil lands, banks to weather crisis

By MARY TOBIN
United Press International

NEW YORK — Debt-laden oil producing countries and their lender banks are in for some rough times in the months ahead but both should survive the crisis, bankers and economists beleive.

William Ogden, former vice chairman of Chase Manhattan Bank and head of the Institute of International Finance, a group of international bankers that is setting up a sort of clearing house on international debt, said lower oil prices indeed "will impair some oil producing countries with large debt and ambitious development plans."

Mexico, with foreign debt in excess of $80 billion, and Venezuela with loans of $26 billion, fall into this category.

"The banks will wring their hands and kick their heels and ask for federal assistance, raising the specter of awesome destruction of the system," said Milton Copulos, director of energy studies at the Heritage Foundation, a Washington-based research group.

"But in the end, although I do believe there will be government help, no big bank is going to go under because of loans to foreign countries," Copulos said. "The worst that will happen is that some of them will not make much money."

The impact of lower oil prices on oil importing debtor countries is overwhelmingly favorable.

"Brazil, Turkey and Argentina are just a few of the countries with large foreign debt that will be helped enormously by lower oil prices and lower interest rates on their debt," Copulos said.

But some oil-producing countries that "were counting on increasing oil revenues to sustain higher growth rates . . . now are in for difficult times and may need assistance in servicing their external debt," Ogden said in a speech in New York Monday.

Ogden believes Mexico, for one, will "merit consideration on this score."

Analysts and bankers are quick to point out, as one put it, that Mexico's debts "are well secured over the longer-term by the really enormous oil reserves, and if necessary, it can pump up to a billion barrels a day of additional oil."

However, Benjamin Weiner, head of Probe International, a political risk evaluation firm, said although "nobody's arguing that Mexico has the oil, it does not have the infrastructure to pump much more than it is doing at present.

"But it would not be in U.S. interests to let a country with 80 million people that is on our doorstep experience financial collapse," Weiner said. "I'm astonished at the concern over El Salvador in light of the problem on our very border."

Copulos believes the United States "will be the guarantor of last resort" for Mexico because "we really have no choice."

Venezuela, analysts agree, is a different matter altogether.

"The country has significant debt and on paper doesn't appear to be well secured," Copulos said. "But when one looks at the assets of its state oil company and at the country's accounting methods which tend to undervalue its assets, the picture appears brighter."

Venezuela also has significant resources with the International Monetary Fund in that it has "automatic drawing rights" based on its past contributions.

A banker also believes that Venezuela's delay in coming to grips with its problems lies in the fact "they are not used to thinking of themselves in terms of a 'problem' country. They are responsible people and they will straighten out their payment problems."

Nigeria, another OPEC member, which has over $9 billion in foreign debt "will be a basket case no matter what it does," said one observer.

Demand key to stability in oil prices

By ROZ LISTON
United Press International

Analysis

NEW YORK — OPEC's fragile pact on oil pricing and production should prevent world oil prices from sinking to $20 or $25 a barrel if demand rebounds, analysts say.

But most believe OPEC's unprecedented decision to cut its base oil price by $5 to $29 a barrel was unrealistic and left the cartel's crude about $1 a barrel above its current market value, paving the way for further price erosion.

Several oil specialists said OPEC should have limited output to about 16 million barrels daily rather than retaining its 17.5 million barrel-a-day production ceiling that is too high to reduce the global oil glut and defend the new $29 base price at present.

Since the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries now is producing less than 14 million barrels a day, "the 17.5 million barrel production ceiling is meaningless until demand picks up to exceed that level," said Al Bassano, editor of the Oil Buyers Guide in Lakewood, N.J.

"Only then will OPEC have an effective restraint on supply," he said.

Most analysts do not expect Mexico and Britain, OPEC's major rivals, to challenge the cartel's new prices for fear of starting a price war. The Soviet Union, despite repeatedly undercutting OPEC, does not pose a serious threat, they said.

Alvin Silber, senior oil analyst at Dean Witter Reynolds, believes OPEC has "a reasonably good chance" of putting a floor under world oil prices at $29 a barrel and averting a price crash.

"I think the OPEC agreement is substantial enough to rally petroleum prices on the spot and wholesale markets and to reverse the pricing direction where the possibility of $20 or $25 a barrel oil was being discounted," Silber said.

Earlier this year prices plunged on the spot market, where petroleum is sold to the highest bidder, and prompted refiners to slash gasoline and heating oil prices in anticipation of an oil price break to perhaps $20 a barrel.

But now that OPEC has reduced its prices by $5 a barrel, [illegible] revive oil demand by spurring world economic recovery and encouraging oil companies to end the inventory rundown that has aggravated the glut.

Analysts estimate demand for OPEC oil could surge to 19 million barrels a day if the oil industry stopped using inventories to meet current consumption.

"The real test will come in a month, two or three," Silber said. "If the spot market rallies and oil demand rises because oil destocking has ended and the world economy is stronger, OPEC's new price probably will hold."

Joseph Tovey, head of Tovey & Co. investment bankers, expects spot crude oil prices to fall to $25 a barrel or lower within six months as OPEC mavericks resume covert price discounts and ignore their production quotas.

But Silber said Saudi Arabia's new role as OPEC's "swing producer" will enable the kingdom to protect the $29 base price by using its vast production capacity to force renegades out of the market.

Grain futures

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wheat, corn and oats were higher and soybeans substantially higher at the close Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was up 5 to 2¼ cents; corn up 6¼ to 4½; oats up 3¼ to 2½; and soybeans up 9 to 10 cents.

The market, which opened mostly lower, did a turnaround within a few minutes on local short-covering and professional demand.

Toward midday, DeKalb-Pfizer Genetics, a subsidiary of Heinold Commodities Inc., predicted sharply lower corn and soybean acreages this year. The estimate was for 58.88 million acres of corn, down from 80.1 million last year, and 58.45 million acres of soybeans compared to 72.2 in 1981.

The market rallied further on that news, hitting stops in all pits.

The large professional firm that initiated the morning rally bought 7 million bushels of May soybeans and 2 million bushels of May corn during the session.

Good volume also was reported in soybean oil and soybean meal.

Sharp gain seen in new construction

NEW YORK (UPI) — The value of new construction contracting this year is expected to reach $178.3 billion — 15 percent above the 1982 levels — as a result of falling interest rates and the step-up of public works spending, F.W. Dodge reported Wednesday.

The revised figure is almost $11 billion more than predicted six months ago.

According to George A. Christie, vice-president and chief economist for McGraw Hill Information Systems, "the acceleration of contracting in last year's closing quarters will be felt through the first half of 1983 in terms of stronger demands for building products and more jobs, as this construction is brought to completion."

In the first scheduled update of its 1983 Dodge-Sweet's Construction Outlook, the report indicated that "interest rates came down more sharply than expected in 1982's last quarter, producing strong construction gains that will be felt through 1983."

"Largely due to the drop in interest rates, our housing figure has been revised upward to 1.475 million units. In addition, public works construction is heading for a gain of 2 percent instead of another loss, due to the new fuel tax and the acceleration of previously planned public projects," Christie said.

According to Christie, the revised picture for 1983 shows housing at $85.9 billion, 48 percent above 1982's $58.1 billion; nonresidential construction at $54.5 billion, 8 percent below last year's $59.2; and nonbuilding (public works) construction at $37.9 billion, a 2 percent gain from 1982's $37.3 billion.

"The rate of housing starts will ease back from the unrealistically high first-quarter volume — a statistical aberration — and later rebound to a rate of 1.55 million in the fourth quarter of the year," Christie said.

The economist added "the most probable estimate for 1983 is a mix of 900,000 one-family homes and 575,000 multifamily units."

Since contracting for commercial and industrial building typically lags general business activity by as much as a year, Christie noted that it will take most of 1983 to achieve the "vigorous" general economic expansion that will "set the stage" for the recovery of nonresidential building.

"This year, store and warehouse contracting is the best bet for improvement," he said.

According to Christie, over the next few years the public works construction sector will be feeling the impact of two new government programs designed to create more jobs.

"One of these new programs, The Surface Transporation Assistance Act of 1982, is near enough to implementation so that (it) is likely to add a net $2 to 2.5 billion to highway and bridge construction this year," the report concluded.

Aviation pioneer honored

DALLAS (UPI) — The founder of McDonald's Corp. and the woman who co-founded the Beech Aircraft Corp. are among six Americans named as laureates to The Business Hall of Fame.

Three of the honorees are living and three were inducted posthumously. The Business Hall of Fame is founded and sponsored by Junior Achievement, the business education organization.

The 1983 laureates include Olive Ann Beech, chairman emeritus, Beech Aircraft Corp., Wichita, Kan.; Ray A. Kroc, founder and senior chairman of the board of McDonald's Corp.; and Abe Plough, honorary chairman of the board of Schering-Plough Corp.

Honored posthumously were John Deere, who revolutionized agriculture in the last century with the first successful steel plow; Edward H. Harriman, a major financier and builder of American railroads; and Leo Baekeland, a pioneer in development of plastics.

Mrs. Beech and her husband, the late Walter H. Beech, founded Beech aircraft in Wichita in 1932. She served as secretary-treasurer of the firm until Mr. Beech's death in 1950, as chairman and president from then until 1968, and as chairman until September 1982.

Under Kroc, the McDonald's chain of fast food restaurants grew from its original location in Des Plaines, Ill., a Chicago suburb, to more than 6,700 stores located throughout the United States and in 29 foreign countries. He was the chief executive officer of the corporation from its founding in 1955 until retirement 1973.

Plough entered the drug field as a teenager with $125 borrowed from his father. Between 1910 and 1968 he built the Plough Chemical Co. into a major maker of toiletries, cosmetics and non-prescription drugs. Later Plough bought radio stations, using them to advertise his products and also as investments. In 1971 his firm merged with Schering Corp. and he was the first chairman of the newly formed Schering-Plough, Inc.

Induction of the new business laureates will take place Thursday.

Tennessee bank holding firm planned

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Banker C.H. Butcher Wednesday announced plans to bring 12 Tennessee banks together in a holding company that would have assets of more than $1 billion.

C&C Bank of Knox County, the flagship of Butcher's banking empire with assets of $244.5 million, would be included in the company, Mike Butler, Butcher's spokesman, said. Also included would be United Southern Bank of Nashville.

Butcher plans to finance the holding company with more than $30 million in capital and equity that would include Butcher's elegant home in Knoxville. Butler said the residence has been appraised at more than $1 million.

Ownership of the banker's "Butchvue" home was transferred to a Miami attorney on Feb. 11, the last business day before brother Mike Butcher's United American Bank failed.

Last year, one of the world's top pair of women players, Betty Ann Kennedy of Shreveport, La., and Carol Sanders of Nashville, Tenn., rose closer to the top by winning the World Ladies' Pair Championship in Biarritz. And to prove they can do just as well against the men, these two southern belles finished as the highest ranking pair of women in the prestigious U.S. blue Ribbon Pairs Championship in Minneapolis last fall. Today's hand features Betty Ann earning a fine score by bringing in a vital overtrick.

Betty Ann won the trump lead with her jack and tried the ace to uncover the bad break. A diamond was passed to East and a club returned was won by South's ace. The diamond ace was cashed and a dimond was ruffed with South's small trump. The trump queen came next and dummy was entered with the jack of clubs to draw the last trump. South still had the heart ace to reenter her hand and she had no problem scoring 11 tricks.

Would Betty have made her overtrick had East switched to hearts after winning his diamond trick? Certainly. She would win the ace, play ace and ruff a diamond, enter dummy with the club jack to draw the last trump and a club to her hand would net the same 11 tricks. Only an original heart lead by West could rock the boat and who could blame West for not finding that lead?
